Alter Likely G. O. P. Compromise Candidate

BEIDLEMAN FILES HIS PETITION BUT MAY
WITHDRAW TOMORROW; MACKEY EXPECTED
TO GET OUT OF RACE IF THE PLAN WORKS

All Indications Are Now That There Will Be A
Three Cornered Contest Between Pinchot,
Anti-Organization Man; John S. Fisher, Of
Indiana, And The Compromise Choice.

ONEMORE DAY WILL TELL WHOLE STORY

Harrisburg, Pa., April 6.—Edward Beidleman, Lieutenant Governor, today filed his nomination petition for the Republican gubernatorial nomination at the State Department. It contains 35,000 signatures obtained in a majority of the counties of the state. While friends of the state administration who are supporting George E. Alter, Attorney General, for the nomination, contended that Beidleman will withdraw, the Lieutenant Governor's supporters contend he is in the fight to the end.

Indications this afternoon are that the contest for Governor will be a three sided one, the contenders being Gifford Pinchot, State Forester, who is running without the support of the organization faction; John S. Fisher, State Banking Commissioner, backed by the manufacturing and banking interests, and George E. Alter, Attorney General and state administration candidate.

The Attorney General would make no declaration relative to his attitude in the matter today, but his petitions are now being circulated and will be here for filing tonight. The petitions of Pinchot and Fisher are still on file. Harry A. Mackey, Chairman of the Workmen's Compensation Board, has filed his petition, but under the alleged agreement by which Alter is to become a compromise candidate, Mackey will withdraw. It is not likely that Charles A. Snyder will file. The plan of the administration in striking out for the Attorney General contemplates the withdrawal of all of the Capitol Hill candidates but Gifford Pinchot.

GENOA CONFERENCE MOTHER SHOT WHEN
WILL BE FORCED TO CALLED TO DOOR BY
FACE REPARATIONS DAUGHTER'S SCREAM

Berlin, Germany, April 6.—The Genoa Conference cannot disregard the question of reparations, Chancellor Wirth, of Germany, declared in an interview with a representative of the United Press on the eve of his departure for Italy. The German Chancellor maintained the question of what Germany can pay is fundamental and must be made a basis for any European settlement. From all quarters of Europe come insistent demands that the reparations question must be cleared up. The attitude of those who would ignore the question is characterized as an ostrich policy.

Newark, N. J., April 6.—Called into the vestibule at the front door of her home by the frantic screams of her daughter Carrie, aged 18, Mrs. Antonio Castella, aged 46, was just and instantly killed by an unknown man with a smorg. The murderer fled. Mrs. Castella was found dead in the doorway of her home when the police arrived. According to information given to the police by Carrie Castella, she and a girl friend separated at a corner near the Castella home at about 2:30 o'clock this morning, after having visited a theatre and a restaurant. When near her home she observed a man following her. A short distance from the house the police found a revolver holster which is the only clue in their possession.

PURCHASE OF FILMS BY
FORESTRY DEPT. LEGAL

Harrisburg, Pa., March 30.—Purchase of films for use in the educational work of the state department of forestry is legal and can be made out of the contingent appropriations of the department according to an opinion handed down by Deputy Attorney General Swoope.

The question had been raised in the department whether such an expenditure could be made for pictures illustrating the part forestry plays in the life of the average person.

MARRIED

Mr. Harry D. Snyder, son of John and Mary Snyder of Hyde City, and Miss Roxie Annie Passmore, daughter of George (deceased) and Elizabeth Passmore of Clearfield R. D. Pa., were united in marriage on Wednesday, April 5th, 1922 in the M. E. parsonage, Hyde City, by the Rev. Arthur A. Price.

The young couple are highly respected citizens of Lawrence township and have the best wishes of their many friends.

STONE CASE GOES TO JURY

New York, N. Y., April 6.—The case of Olivia Stone, charged with slaying Ellis Kinkadee, Cincinnati lawyer, was given to the jury this afternoon.

RECEPTION TO NEW PASTOR

The congregation of Trinity Methodist church will hold a reception for their new pastor, Rev. Horace Lincoln Jacobs tomorrow (Friday) evening.

Oral J. Shugarts, who had been attending an automobile school at Kansas City, Mo., the past three months, returned home Monday last.

CHIEFS CONFER ON COAL STRIKE

"PUBLIC SENTIMENT," SAYS LEADER OF MINER'S ORGANIZATION, "WILL END BIG
STRIKE IN TWO WEEKS;" DENY THAT A
BIG STOCK OF COAL IS IN EXISTENCE

Indianapolis, Indiana, April 6.—Public sentiment will force an end to the nation-wide coal strike within two more weeks, officials at United Mine Workers headquarters stated today. Small industries are almost at the bottom of their coal bins now and lack of fuel will close their doors, is the opinion of Lawrence Dwyer, West Virginia representative of the union executive board. When their supply is exhausted thousands of men will be thrown out of work and they will let out a yell that will be heard across the continent. The much heralded 65,000,000 tons reserve on hand when the strike started six days ago, is not evenly distributed; most of it is in the hands of the big corporations. If the mines are down fifteen days other lines will be forced into idleness because they will not be in a position to reach any of the stored coal.

NON-UNION MINERS
OF FRICK COMPANY
JOIN THE STRIKERS

Uniontown, Pa., April 6.—Forty-two national organizers were transpiring Fayette County preaching the doctrine of unionism. 15, non-union miners have been converted causing a shut-down of thirty mines including those operated by the H. C. Frick Company. The strike is spreading in the Connellsville region where 30,000 are reported to have joined the national wide strike.

OLD CLOTHES WANTED!

The Salvation Army is getting calls for more clothing than they have in stock and take this means of making an appeal to the citizens of Clearfield to send them any second hand clothing that they can spare. Clothing of all kinds can be used, men's women's and children's. Do not neglect to answer this worthy appeal if you have anything at all that you can give to those who are worthy and needy.

RED CROSS NURSES
STRESS BEDSIDE
NURSING HERE

Report Of School Nurse
Is Interesting; Many
Classes In Nursing Are Held In Community.

INVITE INSPECTION

The following report of the School Nurse for Clearfield Borough should prove of a great deal of interest to Clearfield people generally. Miss Ross in addition to giving a summary of her activities, accompanies the same with several observations that should appeal to our people:—

Summary of the Nursing Report for the month of March, 1922:

No. patients cared for this month	27
No. patients discharged	14
No. patients recovered	24
No. patients improved	7
No. patients died	3
No. visits made	133
Child welfare visits	189
School visits	45
Home visits to school children	60
Office calls	25
Attendance at baby clinics	17
Cost of transportation	$11.22
Nursing fees collected	73.45

With this statistical report I wish to say just a word in regard to the work of our Chapter. Besides the service given the ex-soldiers and families our greatest theme of work is the Nursing Services. Our Red Cross nurses do bedside nursing, hold baby clinics, nutrition classes and teach classes in home hygiene and care of the sick, having now one hundred and twenty ladies enrolled in this class. Our nurse in Houtzdale has three classes organized, while our nurse in Curwensville has two classes, one in Curwensville and one in Mahaffey. Our local nurse has just organized her third class.

Baby clinics have been established for over a year but the past few months have been very poorly attended due I think to weather. Mothers please remember Thursday afternoon from 3-5 P. M. is the day—so bring sick or well babies.

Another phase of service rendered is that of nursing care of the Industrial policy holders of Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. When one is insured with this company and holding such a policy, it entitles them to a nurse when they are sick or in need of nursing care.

COME ON!

LET US CLEAN UP OUR TOWN EARLY THIS SPRING
And do away with the disease-breeding places before the warm weather comes. It will not only make our town healthier but much better to look at.

It is up to you to have your trash and rubbish hauled away—so let us all rake up our lots and clean up around the business places and have everything hauled to the garbage dump.

This is requested by the Burgess and the Board of Health and should have the hearty endorsement of every citizen.

BORAH BELIEVES TROUBLE IS ALREADY
BREWING OUT OF JAPANESE PACT AND
WILL SO INFORM THE SENATE SOON

Washington, D. C., April 6.—Dangerous complications are brewing in the far east which may lead to war involving the United States because of its ratification of the Pacific Treaty, Senator Borah, of Idaho, will inform the Senate. The recent Japanese-Chita clash is indication that the situation will charge Japan with the responsibility for this trouble. Borah holds that Japan stirred up the row with the Chita republic that culminated in a clash of the Chita-Red troops with fairly heavy casualties. Tokio messages claim that Japan ordered the Reds to retire.

DuBois School Cost For Burgess Kittleberger
1922 Will Be $111,687; Acts On Complaints Of
Millage Laid At 36 1-2 Citizens On Canines

The DuBois City School Board decided on their budget and laid the millage for 1922 at a meeting held Wednesday evening.

DuBois taxpayers will spend approximately $111,686.77 on their schools next term. The total millage is placed at 36 1-2 mills. Of this 26 mills will be devoted to paying teachers' salaries, while 4 1-2 mills, together with the $5.00 per capita school tax is expected to supply $49,400 for current or general expenses. The bond fund will require 6 mills.

The automatic increase in salaries the coming year, under the Teacher's Salary Act will total $7,000, while the budget also provides $4800 for new teachers for this year.

So many complaints have come to Burgess Kittleberger, the past few weeks concerning dogs running at large in the borough that the State Agricultural Department, which has the enforcement of the Dog Law, in their hands, has been appealed to and they insist that an officer be appointed to exterminate all unlicensed dogs and all others found running at large. Dog owners can prevent this being done by getting license tags and tying up their dogs. If this is not done by April 15th, the State law will be complied with to the letter, an officer employed and every dog running at large taken up and shot.

After Speeders Also

Complaint is also being very generally made concerning the way speed maniacs are driving about the town, and this includes truck drivers noisily and recklessly over our streets. This, too, must be stopped without further delay and as warnings do not appear to have any effect the Burgess has ordered that distances be measured off on three streets in the town for the purpose of trapping these speed demons. These measured courses will be properly marked off and two watchmen assigned to each and law violations in this regard will be brought up with a round turn. Fine and costs will be visited on every violator without fear or favor and those who would save themselves trouble and expense will do well to heed this announcement and obey the law.

Compliments Local
Attorney For Handling
Of Case At Ridgway

Attorney W. C. Miller, of the law firm of Miller & Hartwick, is interested as counsel in several of the ten murder cases before the Elk county Court at this term and last week conducted the defense of Gregorio Monea, who was convicted on Monday last of Murder in the first degree for the killing of Edward Dill at Johnsbury recently.

In speaking of Mr. Miller's plea in defense of Monea, the Ridgway Record of Monday last, said:—

Attorney W. C. Miller, of Clearfield, in arguing before the jury for the defense of Gregorio Monea, charged with the murder of Edward Dill, gave what was termed by many as the most logical presentation of conclusions drawn from the evidence submitted ever given in the history of the local court. The speaker did not wax eloquent and refrained from dramatic, but gave the evidence and outlined his decisions in a simple, straight forward manner. The address consumed two hours and thirty minutes. The court room was filled with spectators. At the end of Mr. Miller's talk court was adjourned for two hours, until 1:30, when the Commonwealth presented its argument.

DISTRICT OFFICERS TO TESTIFY IN THE
CONGRESSIONAL PROBE

John Brophy, president of District No. 2, United Mine Workers of America, and Vice President James Mark, of the same organization, left Clearfield yesterday for Washington, D. C., where they will testify in the hearings being conducted before a Congressional investigating committee into the coal industry.

VALUABLE CARLOAD
OF MANUFACTURED
GOODS IS GUARDED

A Clearfield manufacturing plant was shipping an order of its finished product to the eastern markets the first of the week and were given a New York Central car for loading on Monday. The loading was completed too late to catch the afternoon freight and it was necessary for the loaded car to remain on the side track above the station all night. The cargo was valued at $5,000 and the New York Central people paid enough attention to the crime wave sweeping the country to put a special watchman on duty whose business was to guard the car and its valuable contents.

Mrs. Mary Gearhart, who has been ill at her home on Williams street with a severe attack of neuritis, is improving slowly.

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By J. D. C.

The present coal strike moved Arthur Brisbane, the great New York Editor to pay his respects to capital and labor. He gave the mine owners credit with manipulating the workman into a position where he would get the worst of it and closed his story by "hitting the nail on the head" with a sledge hammer as follows: The mine owners know where and how to hire intelligence, and pay well for it. The workmen, to a sad extent, remind you of the man that "never forgot an enemy or remembered a friend." They forgot those that help them, they do not adequately reward good leadership.

Literally thousands of fishermen in Pennsylvania have failed to obtain the fishermen's licenses which are required for fishing, except on one's own land, under the act of 1921, and officers of the Department of Fisheries say there will be a rush for the permits in the next fortnight, as the trout season opens on April 15. Arrangements have been made for game, forestry and State police officers to assist the fish wardens in enforcement of the law. Virtually every stream in the State will be covered to see that the law is complied with.

The licenses are procurable from the offices of County Treasurers, and every person more than twenty-one whether male or female, must have one unless on own land. The license also will affect fishing in the Delaware and on Lake Erie. Revenue from the license goes to the Department of Fisheries for operation of hatcheries and propagation work.

The generation of folks now inhabiting Pennsylvania's hills, whether the hills be solidly built into towns densely populated and thrifty, or only dotted here and there with the shade of some countryman, know little or nothing about old time ecology. If they did and practiced them as the generation which grew up fifty to seventy-five years ago did there would be so many wealthy people they would get into each other's way.

The grandfathers of the present generation never knew what it was to be sent to the store for soap, for instance. Sometimes, some spendthrift would purchase a cake of "fancy" soap for mother's Christmas gift, but that would lay on the soap dish in the guests' room all year, used only when there would be a visitor in the house; when the youngsters would "sneak" it or when big sister was washing up on Saturday evening, preparatory to entertaining her beaux.

They had a cheaper and better way of getting their soap. They conserved their resources and made it. The cost was nothing. Nothing went to waste. Making soap was on a par with grandfather who raised his own tobacco and cured it in the granary. This, when properly aged, was chewed, the old quids were laid on the hearth mantle and dried and when dried and when dry, would be smoked and when smoked, the ashes would be used for snuff.

Soap making was just as complete. The farmers used wood for fuel. The wood ashes were carried to some shed and kept dry. While this accumulation was going on, all greases accumulating about the premises were saved. When the butchering was done, the "dirty" lard was saved; the bacon skins were dried; the strong fryings off the hams, shoulders and fitches were kept, and even the fat bites that the "sneaken younguns" would stick under their plates, were placed in the dirty grease crock.

When spring would come, the barrels were full of wood ashes and the fat crocks were overflowing. A barrel or large cask was then placed with flange about the edge except an upon a large square of sheet iron, open spout at the lowest corner. The cask would be filled with dry wood ashes and water poured on them. Eventually the water would work through the ashes and by the time it got to the bottom and ready to run into a vessel prepared for its reception, it had gathered a sufficient volume of lye to eat up fat meat.

When a sufficient quantity of lye was thus produced, it was placed in an iron kettle, put over a fire and when it was heated and boiled down to the desired strength, the dirty fats were added and after boiling for a time, the fire was permitted to die down and the result was, a kettle full of soft soap.

This process could be kept up as many times as feasible, the limit being only the quantity of fat. So many pounds of fat were required for a given number of gallons of lye. The soap could be placed in a vat or water tight barrel, placed in the cellar and it would keep indefinitely. The soap was of a livery consistency and was most excellent for all purposes. If soft soap would not remove dirt from clothing, floors or board walks, it was certain nothing else would.

To make hard soap, "store" lye was used. Otherwise the process was the same. Just dissolve the lye and add the fats and when the fats had all been eaten up with the lye, it was done and cooling, could be cut out in cakes the desired size. The latter was more generally used about the family laundry and for washing hands and faces. Thus the wastes were used up and not a penny was expended for soap in a year, unless some person got an extravagant streak and bought a cake of toilet soap.

Darken Fish Bowl.

On the outside of your goldfish bowl paint the bottom and about two inches above the bottom in thick green paint. This adds greatly to the comfort of your pets. They will not swim so wildly but seek the bottom and rest. Very pretty castles can be built of rough pebbles, and cement (choosing a cement that will not be affected by water) projections, nooks and tunnels will be appreciated by the fish. Boys and girls, too, will find making them a pleasure.

Trusts as Ancient as Pyramids.

Like many other things supposed to be entirely modern, trusts are by no means new features of life. They are, indeed, at least as ancient as the pyramids. It appears that the earliest form of trust was the cornering of foodstuffs by monarchs and their agents. Assyrian records 7,000 or 8,000 years old give accounts of these monopolistic transactions by tyrannical rulers.

MARATHON'S HERE

Good Bye Wear

THE fact that distribution has been established locally for Marathon Motor Oils is GOOD NEWS for the automobile and truck owner.

The Lubrication of the automotive engine is a serious problem. SERVICE AND SAFETY demand that FRICTION AND WEAR be reduced to a minimum.

Merely "oiling" your car will not accomplish this result—it must be properly lubricated.

MARATHON MOTOR OILS are scientifically prepared, under the direction of Lubrication Engineers, to meet a given mechanical condition. They are marketed on a basis of GUARANTEED RESULTS by the Transcontinental Oil Company, an organization substantially able to fulfill its obligations.

We are ready to serve you with Marathon Lubrication.

As an event in the Christianity of humanity, Easter, not so much unlike the Christmas season which comes a few months before, is a great day of hope and new life. And Easter has the additional charm of being seasonable. The enthusiasm of the devotees of the Easter bonnet and other finery is contagious; its impulse to exult in the advent of a new order is irresistible to humankind.

Easter symbolizes the triumph of the spirit over the body. And so it is in the growing world of vegetation. Obtrusion of selfishness, feverish materialism and unseemly display are not to be sanctioned at the expense of the heart and soul of humanity, but as an annual reminder of the one great fundamental truth, it is the most significant of all days.

To the thoughtful Easter is proof unbounded of hope inexhaustible, of life eternal, of promises that will be fulfilled. It is a day without parallel. With the sublime figure of the resurrection before him, no man need despair. It makes the believer see his future with a confidence rooted in firm faith and guided by the event which gave the world a new chart of life.

The banker furnishes, in one way or another, a large part of the money with which business is conducted. Having lent money to be used in a business venture, he keeps a keen eye on the progress of that venture and on the growing or decreasing value of its assets. A man who advances the money for the plow and the fertilizer and the seed and the live-stock, to be repaid from the proceeds of the crops, is naturally interested in the growth of the corn and the wheat.

What does the banker think of advertising as a force tending to insure the repayment of the money he lends to business?

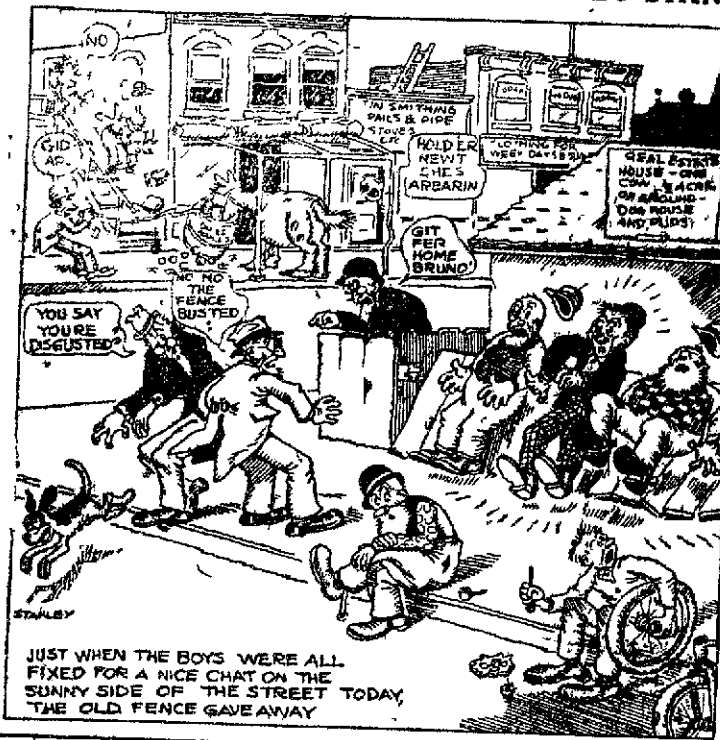

Guy Emerson, vice president of the National Bank of Commerce in New York, says:

"It is becoming more and more common for bankers to regard a radical cutting down of an advertising expenditure with close attention. The sharp reduction in the advertising of nationally distributed articles, the reputations of which were apparently so firmly established that nothing could affect them adversely, has been followed so regularly by a heavy falling off in sales that the need for caution in such cases is widely recognized. The banker is coming to realize that public interest is not necessarily a permanent possession. Not even the greatest corporation of the most popular product can hope to build up a reputation which will of its force endure."

Mr. Emerson is a little guarded in his language, but you get what he means. The banker does not like to see his client's business choked by advertising curtailment.

Expert Story Teller Here
On Community Work;
Hear Her This Evening

Mrs. E. H. Hanley, who is in Clearfield for the first three days of this week to put on a course in story telling for Clearfield Community Service, is a very interesting and experienced person. She has come here from Elmira, N. Y., where she has been doing the preliminary organization work on a large historical pageant of the Chenango Valley, which is to be given there in the Autumn. Part of her work with Community Service and War Camp Community Service during the war, Mrs. Hanley conducted a private school for young children in New York City, using dramatics, music and rhymes as a basis of primary education. In these courses, story telling occupied a prominent place.

She expects to be able to cover in the three sessions she will hold here, the value of the story in the child life of the church and the play group; the home, the library and the play group; types of stories for different ages; special seasonal stories and story telling as an adjunct to teaching courses in the schools; living in the work during vacation period; she will also emphasize the value of story telling as a means of acquiring poise and ease in speaking, and will give a practical demonstration of story telling and story playing.

The first session will be held in the High School this (Thursday) evening at 7 o'clock. Although primarily for those who will volunteer some time for this work on the play ground this summer, all who have to deal with children are most welcome.

Had Oilcloth Effective.
Red, a very bright, red oilcloth, makes an especially effective table covering for a dark corner. Usually the place for such material is in the kitchen, but occasionally one sees it in studios and sitting rooms and in the dull light the effect is really quite lovely.

Why Turn to Right?
The first "keep to the right" law enacted in the United States is believed to have been passed by the Maryland legislature early in 1800.

That's one of the best recommendations that our milk could have when the health authorities who are looking into the kiddies' welfare in school are using it to bring the underweight kiddies up to normal.

The local school board or the school nurse would not use "Clearfield Milk" if it wasn't just the best milk they could find and the milk that carries health and betterment in every ounce.

That's a lesson for grown-ups, too. A lesson wherein you may put on some weight and it's a healthy weight, inasmuch as the ingredients of the milk make a staunch and sturdy flesh.

BEFORE YOU WASH
CURTAINS THIS SPRING—
READ THIS:

Before you struggle this spring with the bothersome business of washing curtains and pinning them to the floor, or on an old-fashioned frame, call us.

We have just installed a wonderful new Curtain Dryer and Finisher which enables us to finish your curtains exactly to measure, without the use of a single hook or pin to mar the fabric. Edges and scallops are perfectly true.

Before washing the curtains, we measure them. After a cleansing bath in ramsoft water and bubbly suds, we dry them—no pulling or stretching is necessary, your curtains come back exactly their original size and shape, daintily and professionally finished.

Send us your curtains—our service will delight you. Phone us today and our representative will call.

OLLIE M. ROSS
School NurseStrength in Proportion.
It is impossible to name the strongest animal since some of the smallest insects have more strength in propo-tion to their weight than the very largest animals. An ant, for instance, may carry a load fifteen or twenty times its own weight, while an elephant could scarcely drag twice its weight.Some Risk in Everything.
While it may be true that the man who risks nothing gains nothing, it is also true that gain does not depend on risk alone. In all business there is an element of risk, but in business this element is smaller than it is in speculation.Real Perfection.
It is only imperfection that complains of what is imperfect. The more perfect we are, the more gentle and quiet we become toward the defects of others.—Fenelon.SEEDS

"I'm not going to lose any sleep over $40,000,000," said Thomas S.

Gipsies in History.

The original gipsies appeared in Europe at about the beginning of the sixteenth century. It is probable that they were of Hindu origin and were either exiled because of their religious beliefs or ran away from the persecution of Tamerlane, or Timur, the great
Tartar conqueror who invaded India.
As their origin was a mystery to Europe when they appeared on its Eastern plains, some German savant declared that they were Egyptians. The popular corruption of the word
"Egyptian" is the name by which they are now known the world over.

We Want You To Know The Facts

A Statement By

The Association of Bituminous Coal Operators of Central Pennsylvania

In a series of statements, of which this is the first, we want to present to you, and by you we mean the man who toils, the business man, the professional man and the miner himself, the facts and conditions leading up to and incident to the strike of the members of the U. M. W. of A., in District No. 2 now in progress.

On March 6th, 1922, Mr. B. M. Clark, President of this Association, wrote to Mr. John Brophy, President of the United Mine Workers of America of District No. 2, Clearfield, Pa., as follows:

"Please advise me at once what date will suit for conferences of our respective scale committees for the purpose of negotiating a scale effective April 1, 1922, to April 1, 1924. It is the desire of the operators, members of our association, for as early a conference as possible."

No written reply was received but on March 17, 1922, Mr. Brophy and Mr. James Marks, President and Vice President, respectively, of the U. M. W. of A., of District No. 2, called personally on Mr. Clark at Indiana, Pa., and advised him that the miners scale committee for District No. 2 would not meet the scale committee of the operators association for the purpose of negotiating a scale agreement until after a settlement had been effected between the United Mine Workers and operators of the Central Competitive field, and that from the best information he could obtain there was no probability of a joint conference in that field prior to April 1, on which date the union miners of this district would strike, or cease to work.

This declaration by Mr. Brophy was carried into effect April 1, not only in direct violation of the customs of the miners in Central Pennsylvania the past 23 years, but also in direct violation of the agreement signed by operators and United Mine Workers of District No. 2, April 26, 1920. The operators and miners of Central Pennsylvania have never taken part in the conferences of the Central Competitive field and never were parties to the wage agreements executed by the operators and miners in that field.

The operators and miners of the Central Pennsylvania field have for the past 23 years negotiated and concluded their own scale agreement governing the Central District of Pennsylvania. In violation of custom and precedent of 23 years standing the U. M. W. of A. of District No. 2, refused to meet the operators of this association to negotiate a wage scale and agreement and in violation of their contract of April 26, 1920, went on strike April 1 last.

Rule 25 of the scale agreement which expired March 31st, 1922, provides:

"In the event of a new scale agreement not having been signed on or before March 31, 1922, then and in that event the U. M. W. of A., District No. 2, will continue all men in mines regularly at work under the wages and conditions of this agreement for an additional thirty days after the date on which the Scale Committees of operators and miners hold their first meeting for the purpose of negotiating a scale to succeed this present contract, the wages paid by the operators to the miners dating from April 1st, 1922, for such portion of the 30 days work as extend beyond April 1st, 1922, shall be those that are agreed to in the next contract. * * *

One minute after the scale agreement of April 26, 1920 expired the union miners of District No. 2 went on strike. The walkout was not delayed so much as 30 minutes, let alone the 30 days to which the miners scale committee of District No. 2, U. M. W. of A. had bound the members of its organization by solemn agreement with the Association of Bituminous Coal Operators of Central Pennsylvania.

Quirinal Originally Church Property. The Quirinal is one of the seven hills upon which Rome stands; it was dedicated by the ancient Romans to Romulus, or Quirinus. The Quirinal palace was built in the sixteenth century by the Roman Catholic church, but after the breach between the church and state in 1870 it became the residence of the Italian kings. The Quirinal, as it is figuratively used, means the court of united Italy and the monarchical regime.

The Wreckers

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright by Chas. Scribner's Sons

"I can't quite get the proper slant on men of the Collingwood type," he remarked, after the pause. "The only time I ever saw him was on the night before the directors' meeting last spring. He was here with his uncle's party in the special train, and that night at the Bullard he had been drinking too much and made a braying ass of himself. I had to knock him silly before I could get him up to his room."

"You did that, Graham?—for a stranger?"

"I did it for the comfort of all concerned. As I say, he was making an ass of himself."

There was another break, and then the major looked up with a little frown.

"That was before you had met Sheila?" he asked, thoughtfully.

"Why, no; not exactly. It was the same night—the night we all dropped off the 'Flyer' and got left behind at Sand Creek. You may remember that we came in later on Mr. Chadwick's special."

The major made no reply to this, and pretty soon the boss was on his feet and excusing himself once more on the after-dinner smoking stunt, saying that he was obliged to go back to the office. The major got up and shook hands with him as if he were bidding him good-bye for a long journey. "You are going down to keep that appointment with Mistlethorpe Hatch?" he said. "You take an old man's advice, Graham, my boy, and keep your hand—figuratively speaking, of course—on your gun. It runs in my mind, somehow, that you are going to be hit—and hit right hard. No, don't ask me why. Call it a rotten suspicion, and let it go at that. Come up to the house, afterward, if you have time, and tell me I'm a false prophet, son; I hope you may."

The boss promised plenty cheerfully as to the calling part, as you'd know he would since he hadn't seen Mrs. Sheila for a long time; and a few minutes later we were on our way, walking briskly, to keep the Fred May engagement with the chief of the grafters.

CHAPTER XIV

The Dead-Live

We found the three disappointed afternoon callers already on hand when we reached the headquarters. The boss said, "Good evening, gentlemen," as pleasant as a basket of chips, and invited the waiting bunch into the private office, snapping on the lights as he opened the door.

No introductions were needed. One of the pair Hatch had brought with him was a lawyer named Marrow, whose home town was Sedgewick; a sharp-nosed, ferret-eyed man who figured as one of the many "local consuls" for Red Tower. The other, Dedmon, was a political place-hunter who had once been sheriff of Arrowhead county.

"You've kept us cooling our heels in your waiting-room for just about the last time, Mr. Norcross!" was the spiteful way in which Hatch opened fire. "We've come to talk straight business with you this trip, and it will be in to your interest than ours if you let us send your clerk away."

While they had been dragging up their chairs and sitting down, I had heard Fred May lock up his typewriter and go, and had been listening anxiously for some noise that would tell me Tarbell was on deck. I thought I heard the door of the outer office open again just as Hatch spoke and it comforted me a whole lot.

The boss didn't pay any attention to Hatch's suggestion about sending me away; acted as if he hadn't heard it. Opening his desk he took a box of cigars from a drawer and passed it. With this concession to the small hospitalities the boss swung his chair to face the trio.

"My time is yours, gentlemen," he said; and Hatch jumped in like a man fairly spilling for a fight.

"For six months, Norcross, you've been moving a pretty wide swath out here in the tall hills. You've been posing as a little tin god before the people of this state, and all the while you've been knifing and slugging and black-jacking private capital and private business wherever and whenever they have happened to get in your way. Now, at the end of the lane, by Jupiter, we've got you dead to rights—you and your d-d railroad!"

"Cut out as many of the personalities as you can, and come to the point," suggested the boss quietly.

"You think I haven't any point to come to?" barked the grafter, with rising anger. "I'll show you! You thought you were the only original trust-usts. When you started your scheme of locally owned elevators and warehouses and coal and lumber-yards and ran us out of business, but I'm here to tell you that your fine-haired little deal to rob us began to die about as soon as it was born."

"How so?" inquired the boss.

"It was a month before your little local stockholders began to get together and swap stock and sell it. In a very short time the control of the whole string of local plants was in the hands of a hundred men. To-day it's in the hands of less than twenty with John Marshall at the head of them. Citizens' Storage & Warehouse is now a consolidated property, and John Marshall, Henckel and I control a majority of its stock. How does that strike you?"

"We've Got You Dead to Rights, You and Your D-d Railroad!"

"It strikes me that the people most deeply interested have been exceedingly foolish to sell their birdright. But that is strictly their own business, and not mine or the railroad company's."

"Wait!" Hatch snarled. "It's going to be both yours and the railroad company's business, before you are through with it. Marrow, here, represents Marshall, and I represent Henckel and myself. What are you going to do about those ground-leases?"

"Nothing at all, except to insist upon the condition under which they were granted by the railroad company."

"Meaning that you are going to try to hold us to the fixed percentage charge for handling, packing, loading, and transferring?"

"Meaning just that. If you raise the proportional market-price charge on the producers and merchants, the leases will terminate."

"I thought that was about where you'd land. Now listen: we're it—Marshall and Henckel and I—and what we say, goes as it lies. We are going to use the present C. S. & W. plants and equipment, charging our own storage and handling percentages, based on anything we see fit. If you pull that ground-lease business on us and try to drive us out, we'll fight you all the way up to the Supreme court. If you beat us there, we'll merely move over to the other side of your tracks to our old Red Tower houses and yards and go on doing business at the old stand."

The boss sat back in his chair, and I could tell by the set of his jaw that he was refusing to be panic-stricken. "You are talking altogether too much for granted, aren't you?" he put in mildly. "You are assuming that the courts will eventually nullify the terms of the ground-leases, or if they do not, that the railroad company will do nothing to save its patrons from falling into this new graft trap."

Hatch snapped his fingers. "Now you are coming to the milk in the coconut!" he rapped out. "That is exactly what we're assuming. You are going to let go, once for all, Norcross. You are not going to fight us in the courts, and neither are you going to allow us out of existence with short cuts, over-charges, and the thousand and one petty persecutions that you railroad buccaners make use of to line your own pockets!"

"But if we refuse to lie down and let you walk over us and our patrons—what then?" the boss inquired.

That brought the explosion. Hatch's eyes blazed and he snarled flat into palm.

"Then we'll knife you, and we'll do it to a velvet finish! After so long a time, we've got you where you can't side-step, Norcross."

The boss refused to be panic-stricken; or, anyhow, he looked that way.

"We've heard that kind of talk many times in the past," he said. "The way to make it effective is to produce the goods."

"That's just what we're here to do!" snapped the Red Tower president vindictively. "You, and the Big Fellows in New York, want a lot of the state railroad laws repealed or amended. If you can't get that string untied, you can't gamble any more with your stock. Well and good. You came here six months ago and set out to manufacture public sentiment in favor of the railroad. You ran up your public-be-pleased flag and beat the tom-tom and blew the hewgaw until you got a lot of dolts and chuckle-heads and easy marks to believe that you really meant it."

"Well, go on."

"With all this humbug and hulla-balloo you still couldn't be quite certain that you had made your point; that your measures would carry through the incoming legislature. After the primaries you counted noses among the candidates and found it was going to be a tight squeak—a d-d tight squeak. Then you did what you railroad people always do; you slipped out quietly and bought a few men—just to be on the safe side."

So it was sprung at last. Hatch was accusing us of the one thing that we hadn't done; that the boss knew we hadn't done.

"I'm afraid you'll have to try again, Mr. Hatch," he said, with a steady smile. Then he added: "Anybody can make charges, you know."

Hatch jumped to his feet and he was almost foaming at the mouth. "Right there is where we've got you!" he shouted. "You were too cautious to put one of your own men in the field so you sent outside for your biiber. He was a stranger, and he had to have help in finding the right men to buy. Dedmon, here, was out of a job—thanks to you and your meddling—and the steering stunt offered good pay. Do you want any more?"

The boss shook his head. "It is a matter of complete indifference to me. I don't know in the least what you are talking about, and you'll pardon me, I hope, if I say that it doesn't greatly interest me."

"By heavens—I'll make it interest you! The ensy-murk candidates were found and bought and paid for—and maybe they'll stay bought, and maybe they won't. But that isn't the point. For a little more money—my money, this time—each of these men has made an affidavit to the fact that railroad money was offered him. They don't say whether or not they accepted it, mind you, and that doesn't cut any figure. They have sworn that the money was tendered. That lets them out and lets you in. You don't believe it? I'll show you," and Hatch whipped a list of names from his pocket and slapped it upon the boss's desk. "Go to those men and ask them: if you want to carry it that far. They'll tell you."

I could see that the boss barely glanced at the list. The glib story of the bribery was like the bite of a slipping crane-hitch—slow to take hold. So far as we were concerned, of course, the charge fell flat; and upon any other hypothesis it was blankly incredible, unbelievable, absurd.

"The affidavits themselves would be much more convincing," I heard the boss say, "though even then I should wish to have reasonable proof that they were genuine."

Hatch was sitting down again and his grin showed his teeth unpleasantly.

"Do you think for a minute that I'd bring the papers here and trust them in your hands?" he rapped out insultingly. "Not much! But we've got them all right, as you'll find out if you balk and force us to use them."

At this point I could see that something in the persistent assurance of the man was getting under the boss's skin and giving him a cold chill. What if it were not the colossal bluff it had looked like in the beginning? What if... Like a blaze of lightning out of a clear sky a possible explanation hit me under the fifth rib, and I guess it hit the boss at about the same instant. What if President Dutton and the New York stock-jobbers, believing as they did that nothing but legislative favor would give them their trading capital in the depressed stock had cut in and done this thing without consulting us?

The boss stirred uneasily in his chair and picked up the paper-knife—a little unconscious trick of his when he wanted time to gather himself.

"Perhaps you would be willing to give me the name of this brother Mr. Hatch?" he said, after a little pause.

"As if you didn't know it!" was the scoffing retort. "There were two of them; one who was hired to do the talking while the real viri-puller stood aside and held the coin bag. We'll skip the hired man." Then he turned to the ex-sheriff. "Write out the name of the bag-holder for him, Dedmon," he commanded, tearing a leaf from his pocket note-book and thrusting it, with a stubby pencil, into Dedmon's hands.

The man from Arrowhead county bent over his knee and wrote a name on the slip of paper, laying the slip on the drawn-out slide of the boss's desk when he had finished the slow pencil-ing. The effect of the thing was all that any plotter could have desired. I saw the boss's face go gray, saw him stare at the slip and heard him say, half to himself, "Howard Collingwood!"

Hatch followed up his advantage promptly. He was afoot and struggling into his overcoat when he said, "You've got what you want after, Norcross, and it has got your goat. We've known all along that you were only blinding and sparring to gain time. We've nailed you to the cross. You let this deal with Marshall and his people stand as it's made, or we'll show you up for what you are. That's the plain English of it."

"You mean that you will go to the newspapers with this?" said the boss, and it was no wonder that his voice was a bit husky.

"Just that. We'll give you plenty of time to think it over. The joint deal with C. S. & W. goes into effect tomorrow, and it's up to you to sit tight in the boat and let us alone. If you don't—if you butt in with the ground-leases, or in any other way—the story will go to the newspapers and every sucker on the line of the P. S. I. will know how you've been pulling the wool over his eyes with all this guff about 'justice first,' and 'the public be pleased.' You're no fool, Norcross. You know they won't lay it to Dutton and the New Yorkers. You've taken pains to advertise it far and wide that you are running this railroad on your own responsibility, and the people are going to take you at your word."

Dedmon, and the lawyer—who hadn't spoken a single word in all the talk—were edging toward the door. The boss didn't make any answer to Hatch's wind-up except to say, "Is that all?"

The other two were out, now, and Hatch turned to stick his ugly jaw out at the boss, and to say, just as if I hadn't been there to look on and hear him:

"No, by Jupiter—it isn't all! In the past six months you've made Gus Henckel and me lose a cold half-million, Norcross. For a less provocation than that, many a man in this neck of woods has been sent back east in the baggage-car, wearing a wooden overcoat. You climb down, and do it while you can stay alive!"

For some time after the three men went away the boss sat staring at the slip of paper on the desk slide. At last he got up, sort of tiredly, I thought, and said to me: "Jimmie, you go down and see if you can find a taxi, and we'll drive out to Major Kendrick's. I promised him I'd go out to the house, you remember."

When our taxi stopped at the major's gate, somebody was coming out just as we were getting ready to go in. The man had the visor of his big flat golf cap pulled down well over his eyes, but I knew him just the same. It was Collingwood!

This looked like more trouble. What was the president's nephew doing here? I wondered about that, and also, if the boss had recognized Collingwood if he had, he made no sign, and a moment later I had pushed the bell-push and Maisie Ann was opening the door for us.

"Both of you? Oh, how nice!" she said, with a smile for the boss and a queer little grimace for me. "Come in. This is our evening for callers. Cousin Basil is out, but he'll be back pretty soon, and he left word for you to wait if you got here before he did."

That message was for the boss, and I lagged behind in the dimly lighted hall while she was showing him into the back parlor. I had dropped down on the hall settee, in the end of it next to the coat-rack, and when Mrs. Sheila came down-stairs and went through the hall, she didn't see me. A second later I heard the boss jump up and say, "At last! It seems as if you had been gone a year rather than a fortnight," and then Maisie Ann came doling out and plunked herself down on the settee beside me.

You needn't tell me that we had no right to sit there listening; I know it well enough. On the other hand, I was just shirky enough to shift the responsibility to Maisie Ann. She didn't make any move to duck, so I didn't.

"You came out to see Cousin Basil?" Mrs. Sheila was saying to the boss. And then: "He had a telephone call from the Bullard, and he asked me to tell you to wait." After that, I guess she sat down to help him wait, for pretty soon we heard her say: "Cousin Basil has told me a little about the new trouble—have you been having a hard quarter of an hour?"

"The worst of the lot," the boss said gravely, and from that he went on to tell her about the Hatch visit and what had come of it; how the grafters had a new claw hold on him, now made possible by an unwarranted piece of meddling on the part of the New York people in the political game.

It was while he was talking about this that Maisie Ann grabbed me by the wrist and dragged me bodily into the darkened front parlor, the door to which was just on the other side of the coat rack. "I thought she had come to her right senses, at last, and was making the shift to break off the eavesdropping. That being the case, I was simply horrified when I found that she was merely fixing it so that we could both see and hear. The sliding doors between the two parlors were cracked open about an inch, and I realized what she was doing: she had pulled me down on the floor beside her, right in front of that crack."

"If you move or make a noise, I'll scream and they'll come in here and end us both!" she hissed in my ear; and because I didn't know what else to do with such a kiddish little terrorist, I sat still. It was dastardly, I know; but what was I to do?

When the boss finished telling her about the Hatch talk, Mrs. Sheila said: "You mean that Mr. Dutton and his associates sent somebody out here to influence the election?"

"Yes; that is it, precisely. But how did you know?"

"You made the inference perfectly plain," she countered. "I have a reasoning mind, Graham; haven't you discovered it before this?"

The boss nodded soberly. "I have discovered a good many things about you during the past six months; one of them is that there was never another woman like you since the world began."

Knowing, as I did, that she had a husband alive and kicking around somewhere, it seemed as if I just couldn't star there and listen to what a break of that kind on the boss's part was likely to lead up to. But Maisie Ann gripped my wrist until she hurt.

"You must listen!" she whispered fiercely. "You're taking care of him, and you've got to know!"

As on many other earlier occasions, Mrs. Sheila slid away from the sentimental side of things just as easy as turning your hand over.

"You are too big a man to let an added difficulty defeat you now," she remarked calmly, going back to the business field. "You are really making a miraculous success. I have just spent two weeks in the capital, as you know, and everybody is talking about you. They say you are in a fair way to solve the big problem—the problem of bringing the railroads and the people together in a peaceable and profitable partnership—which is as it should be."

"It can be done; and I could do it right here on the Pioneer Short Line if I didn't have to fight so many different kinds of devils at the same time," said the boss, scowling down at the fire in the grate. And then with a quick jerk of his head to face her: "You sent the major a wire from the capital last night, telling him to persuade me not to go to Strathcona. Why did you do that? And how did you know I was thinking of going?"

For the first time in the whole six months I saw Mrs. Sheila get a little flustered, though she didn't show it much, only a little more color in her cheeks.

"Some day, perhaps, I may tell you, but I can't now," she said sort of hurriedly. And then: "You mustn't ask me."

"But you did send the wire?"

"Yes."

"And you also sent another to Upton Van Brit?"

"I did."

The boss smiled. "That second message was an after-thought. You were afraid I'd be stubborn and go, anyway. That was some more of your marvelous inner reasoning. Tell me, Sheila, did you know that there was going to be a broken rail-joint set to kill me on that trip?"

That got her in spite of her heavenly calm and I could see her press her pretty lips together hard.

"Was that what they did?" she asked, a bit trembly.

He nodded. "Van Brit was on the pilot engine ahead of my car, and he found it. There was no harm done. It was bad enough, God knows, to set a trap that would have killed everybody on my train; but this other thing that has been pulled off tonight is even worse. Mr. Dutton and his unprincipled followers have set a thing on foot here which is due to grind us all to powder. Fast that they have contrived to handcuff me so that I can't make a move without pulling down consequences of a personal nature upon President Dutton, himself."

"Now my 'marvelous inner reasoning' has gone quite blind," she said, with a queer little smile. "You'll have to explain."

"It's simple enough," said the boss shortly. "If Mr. Dutton had sent only three emissaries out here to bribe the members of the legislature—but he didn't; he included a member of his own family."

I was looking straight at Mrs. Sheila as he spoke, and I saw a sudden frightened shock jump into the slate-gray eyes. Just for a second. Before you could count one, it was gone and she was saying quietly:

"A member of his own family? That is very singular, isn't it? Was there—was this thing that was done actually criminal?" she asked, just breathing it at him.

"It was, indeed. The election laws of this state have teeth. It is a penitentiary offense to bribe either the electorate or the lawmakers."

There was silence for a little time, and she was no longer looking at him; she was staring into the heart of the glowing coals in the grate basket. By and by she said: "You haven't told me this man's name—the one who did the bribing; may I know it?"

I knew just what the boss was going to do, and he did it; took the slip of paper that Dedmon had written on from his pocket and passed it across to her. If there was another shock for her none of us could see it. She had her face turned away when she looked at the name on the paper. Pretty soon she said, sort of dreadingly:

"Once you told me that the true test of any human being came when he was asked to eliminate the personal factor; to efface himself completely in order that his cause might prosper. Do you still believe that?"

"Of course. It's all in the day's work. Any cause worth while is vastly bigger than any man who is trying to advance it."

"Than any man, yes; but for a woman, Graham, wouldn't you allow something for the woman?"

"I thought we had agreed long ago that there is no double standard, either in morals or ethics—one thing for the man and another for the woman. That is your own attitude, isn't it?"

She didn't say whether it was or not. She was holding the bit of paper he had given her so that the light from the fire fell upon it when she said: "I suppose your duty is quite clear. In the slang of the street, you must 'beat Mr. Hatch to it.' You must be the first to denounce this bribery, clearing yourself and letting the ax fall where it will."

The boss was shaking his head a bit doubtfully.

the situation here would become simply impossible."

"Well!" she prompted. "Such a move would rightly and properly bring a wire demand for my resignation, of a nature that couldn't be ignored—only it wouldn't, because I should anticipate it by resigning first. That is a small matter, introducing the personal element. But the results to others; to the men of my staff and the rank and file, and to the public, which, as you say, is just beginning to realize some of the benefits of a real partnership with its principal railroad; these things can't be so easily ignored."

"You have thought of some other expedient?"

"No; I haven't got that far yet. But I am determined that Hatch shall not be allowed to work his graft a second time upon the people who are trusting me. I believe in the new policy we are trying out. I'd sling my own fortune into the gap if I had one, and more than that, I'd pull in every friend I have in the world if by so doing I could stand the Pioneer Short Line upon a solid foundation of honest ownership. That is all that is needed in the present crisis—absolutely all."

He was on his feet now and tramping back and forth on the hearth rug. At one of these back-turnings I saw Mrs. Sheila reach out quickly and lay the bit of paper with its accusing scrawl on the glowing coals. Then she said, quite calm again:

"In time to come you will accomplish even that, Graham—this change of ownership that we have talked of and dreamed about. It is the true solution of the problem; not government ownership, but ownership by the people who have the most at stake—the public and the workers. You are a strong man, and you will bring it about. But this other man—who is not strong; the man whose name was written upon the bit of paper I have just thrown into the fire..."

He wheeled quickly, and what he said made me feel as if a cold wind were blowing up the back of my neck, because I hadn't dreamed that he would remember Collingwood well enough to recognize him in that passing moment on the sidewalk.

"That man," he muttered, sort of gratingly: "I had completely forgotten. He was here just a little while ago. I met him as I was coming in. Did he come to see your cousin—the major?"

"No," she said, matching his low tone; "he came to see me."

"You?"

"Yes. Finding himself in a pitfall which he has dug with his own hands, he is like other men of his kind; he would be very glad to climb out upon the shoulders of a woman."

I guess the boss saw red for a minute, but the question he asked had to come.

"By what right did he come to you, Sheila?"

"By what he doubtless thinks is the best right in the world. He is my husband."

It was out at last, and the boss' poor little house of cards that I knew he had been building all these months had got its knock-down in just those four quietly spoken words. As well as I knew him, I couldn't begin to guess what he would do or say. But he was such a splendid fighter that I might have known.

"I heard, no longer ago than this afternoon, that you were not—that your husband was still living," he said, speaking very gently. "I didn't believe it—not fully—though I saw that there might easily be room for the belief. It makes no difference, Sheila. You are my friend, and you are blameless. But before we go any farther I want you to believe that I wouldn't have been brutal enough to give you that bit of paper if I had remotely suspected that Collingwood was the man."

She didn't make any answer to that, and after a while he said: "Having told me so much, can't you tell me a little more?"

"There isn't much to tell, and even the little is commonplace and—disgraceful," she replied, with a touch of weariness that was fairly heart-breaking. "Don't ask me why we were married; I can't explain that, simply because I don't know, myself. It was arranged between the two families, and I suppose Howie and I always took it for granted. I can't even plead ignorance, for I have known him all my life."

"Go on," said the boss, still speaking as gently as a brother might have.

SUIT ENTERED

Suit was entered in Prothonotary Ralston's office yesterday morning by the Saxon Collieries Company against J. E. Fry and Geo. H. Lancy, of DuoBis, trading as the Penna Coal Co., an effort to recover $168.68, the price of a car of coal which the plaintiff company purchased on March 6, 1920, and which they claim was paid for but never delivered.

MONTHS OF SUFFERING

How a Baltimore Girl Recovered Her Health

Baltimore, Maryland.—"For several months I suffered with severe backache and general weakness. I could not sleep comfortably at night for pains in my back. I found your book at home one day and after reading it began at once to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have had very good results and some of my girl friends are taking it now. You may use this letter to help other girls, as the letters in your book helped me."—ROSE WADSWORTH, 3018 Roseland Place, Baltimore, Md.

That is the thought so often expressed in letters recommending Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. These women know what they have suffered, they describe their symptoms and state how they were finally made well. Just plain statements, but they want other women to be helped.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a medicine made from medicinal roots and herbs, and without drugs, to relieve the sickness women so often have, which is indicated by backache, weak feelings, nervousness, and no ambition to get anything done or to go anywhere. It has helped many women. Why not try it?

DOINGS OF THE DUFFS

Our Clerics.

Little by little the Jesuits' stock in trade is being depleted through scientific discovery. An English professor now declares that people get sleepy during the sermon because they hypnotize themselves gazing fixedly at the preacher. It is not because they are inattentive, but because they are too attentive. Therefore, jokes on the subject are not knocks for the parson, but boosts.

Two Sorts of Contagion.
Diseases are not the only things that are contagious. Kindness is contagious; mainly integrity is contagious; all the positive virtues, with real red blood in their veins, are contagious. —Henry VanDyke.

Legend of "Moonmaker."

The title "moonmaker" has been applied to Hakkim Ibn Allah, sometimes also known as the "Vellid Prophet of the Khirassan." It is recorded that he caused a moon to issue from a deep well, which was so brilliant that the real moon was eclipsed by it.

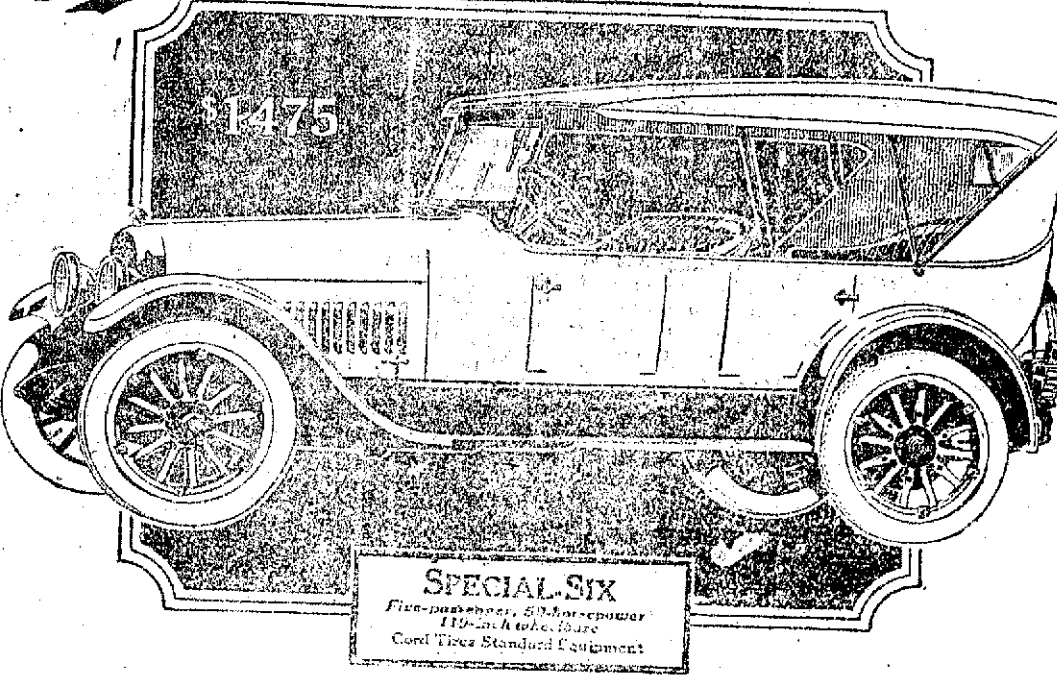

Objected to Pairing.

The first known instance of pairing in the congress of the United States was in 1840. John Quincy Adams prepared a resolute declaration that it violated the constitution, an expression of the house, and the duties of both parties. The resolution was never voted upon and the practice became very common.

Birds in the Dark.

Not a few birds practically rear their nestlings in the dark, says the American Forestry Magazine. Well-known examples of this are seen in sand-martins and kingfishers—birds that dig, or scrape out, long burrows in banks, and lay their eggs at the further end of them.

Rheumatism Caused Heart Trouble

Stomach and Bowel Trouble Caused Rheumatism

When the stomach and bowels are so badly out of order that they caused the food to sour and ferment in the stomach and digestive tract, forming gas that bloats and distends the internal organs, until they press hard upon the heart it is time to do something to stop it.

That is what Mr. Chas. Myer of Uniontown, Pa., did—he got a dollar bottle of Nerv-Worth and felt better before he had finished the bottle. In a short time he declared himself well with all his old time strength and vigor back and sleeping like a top, eating anything he wanted and able to do a man's work every day.

With his other troubles he had headaches and severe attacks of rheumatism—caused of course by the poisons the disordered stomach and bowels were distributing throughout his system every day. After he took Nerv-worth he had no more rheumatism nor severe headaches.

Most first class druggists sell Nervworth at one dollar a bottle. You can always get it at Stewart's drug store in this city and every drug store is authorized to give the money back if not satisfied with the results of the first bottle.

Get at the Real Cause—Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, away goes indigestion and stomach trouble.

Have you a bad taste, coated tongue, poor appetite, a lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested foods? Take Olive Tablets the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain.

Fighting Fire With Fire Insurance

It's a wonderful thing the way folks will turn out to help you fight the dread fire fiend when it assails your property, but have you thought that a very good way to fight fire would be with plenty of fire insurance?

Even if you now have SOME, could you replace your property for what your insurance would net you? You know, these days building costs are much higher and will remain higher for years to come, than they were when you first built.

Let's talk this matter over and let me explain the merits of the companies that I represent.

Alter Likely G. O. P. Compromise Candidate

BEIDLEMAN FILES HIS PETITION BUT MAY
WITHDRAW TOMORROW; MACKEY EXPECTED
TO GET OUT OF RACE IF THE PLAN WORKS

All Indications Are Now That There Will Be A
Three Cornered Contest Between Pinchot,
Anti-Organization Man; John S. Fisher, Of
Indiana, And The Compromise Choice.

ONEMORE DAY WILL TELL WHOLE STORY

Harrisburg, Pa., April 6.—Edward Beidleman, Lieutenant Governor, today filed his nomination petition for the Republican gubernatorial nomination at the State Department. It contains 35,000 signatures obtained in a majority of the counties of the state. While friends of the state administration who are supporting George E. Alter, Attorney General, for the nomination, contended that Beidleman will withdraw, the Lieutenant Governor's supporters contend he is in the fight to the end.

Indications this afternoon are that the contest for Governor will be a three sided one, the contenders being Gifford Pinchot, State Forester, who is running without the support of the organization faction; John S. Fisher, State Banking Commissioner, backed by the manufacturing and banking interests, and George E. Alter, Attorney General and state administration candidate.

The Attorney General would make no declaration relative to his attitude in the matter today, but his petitions are now being circulated and will be here for filing tonight. The petitions of Pinchot and Fisher are still on file. Harry A. Mackey, Chairman of the Workmen's Compensation Board, has filed his petition, but under the alleged agreement by which Alter is to become a compromise candidate, Mackey will withdraw. It is not likely that Charles A. Snyder will file. The plan of the administration in striking out for the Attorney General contemplates the withdrawal of all of the Capitol Hill candidates but Gifford Pinchot.

GENOA CONFERENCE MOTHER SHOT WHEN
FACE REPARATIONS DAUGHTER'S SCREAM

Berlin, Germany, April 6.—The Genoa Conference cannot disregard the question of reparations, Chancellor Wirth, of Germany, declared in an interview with a representative of the United Press on the eve of his departure for Italy. The German Chancellor maintained the question of what Germany can pay is fundamental and must be made a basis for any European settlement. From all quarters of Europe come insistent demands that the reparations question must be cleared up. The attitude of those who would ignore the question is characterized as an ostrich policy.

Newark, N. J., April 6.—Called into the vestibule at the front door of her home by the frantic screams of her daughter Carrie, aged 18, Mrs. Antonio Castella, aged 46, was just and instantly killed by an unknown man this morning. The murderer fled. Mrs. Castella was found dead in the doorway of her home when the police arrived. According to information given to the police by Carrie Castella, she and a girl friend separated at a corner near the Castella home at about 2:30 o'clock this morning, after having visited a theatre and a restaurant. When near her home she observed a man following her. A short distance from the house the police found a revolver holster which is the only clue in their possession.

PURCHASE OF FILMS BY
FORESTRY DEPT. LEGAL

Harrisburg, Pa., March 30.—Purchase of films for use in the educational work of the state department of forestry is legal and can be made out of the contingent appropriations of the department according to an opinion handed down by Deputy Attorney General Swoone.

The question had been raised in the department whether such an expenditure could be made for pictures illustrating the part forestry plays in the life of the average person.

CHIEFS CONFER ON COAL STRIKE

"PUBLIC SENTIMENT," SAYS LEADER OF
MINER'S ORGANIZATION, "WILL END BIG
STRIKE IN TWO WEEKS;" DENY THAT A
BIG STOCK OF COAL IS IN EXISTENCE

Indianapolis, Indiana, April 6.—Public sentiment will force an end to the nation-wide coal strike within two more weeks, officials at United Mine Workers headquarters stated today. Small industries are almost at the bottom of their coal bins now and lack of fuel will close their doors, is the opinion of Lawrence Dwyer, West Virginia representative of the union executive board. When their supply is exhausted thousands of men will be thrown out of work and they will let out a yell that will be heard across the continent. The much heralded 65,000,000 tons reserve on hand when the strike started six days ago, is not evenly distributed; most of it is in the hands of the big corporations. If the mines are down fifteen days other lines will be forced into idleness because they will not be in a position to reach any of the stored coal.

NON-UNION MINERS
OF FRICK COMPANY
JOIN THE STRIKERS

Uniontown, Pa., April 6.—Forty-two national organizers were transpiring Fayette County preaching the doctrine of unionism. 15, non-union miners have been converted causing a shut-down of thirty mines including those operated by the H. C. Frick Company. The strike is spreading in the Connellsville region where 30,000 are reported to have joined the national wide strike.

RED CROSS NURSES
STRESS BEDSIDE
NURSING HERE

Report Of School Nurse
Is Interesting; Many
Classes In Nursing Are Held In Community.

INVITE INSPECTION

The following report of the School Nurse for Clearfield Borough should prove of a great deal of interest to Clearfield people generally. Miss Ross in addition to giving a summary of her activities, accompanies the same with several observations that should appeal to our people:—

Summary of the Nursing Report for the month of March, 1922:

No. patients cared for this month	27
No. patients discharged	14
No. patients recovered	24
No. patients improved	7
No. patients died	3
No. visits made	133
Child welfare visits	189
School visits	45
Home visits to school children	60
Office calls	25
Attendance at baby clinics	17
Cost of transportation	$11.22
Nursing fees collected	73.45

With this statistical report I wish to say just a word in regard to the work of our Chapter. Besides the service given the ex-soldiers and families our greatest theme of work is the Nursing Services. Our Red Cross nurses do bedside nursing, hold baby clinics, nutrition classes and teach classes in home hygiene and care of the sick, having now one hundred and twenty ladies enrolled in this class. Our nurse in Houtzdale has three classes organized, while our nurse in Curwensville has two classes, one in Curwensville and one in Mahaffey. Our local nurse has just organized her third class.

Baby clinics have been established for over a year but the past few months have been very poorly attended due I think to weather. Mothers please remember Thursday afternoon from 3-5 P. M. is the day—so bring sick or well babies.

Another phase of service rendered is that of nursing care of the Industrial policy holders of Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. When one is insured with this company and holding such a policy, it entitles them to nursing care.

LET US CLEAN UP OUR TOWN EARLY THIS SPRING
And do away with the disease-breeding places before the warm weather comes. It will not only make our town healthier but much better to look at.

It is up to you to have your trash and rubbish hauled away—so let us all rake up our lots and clean up around the business places and have everything hauled to the garbage dump.

This is requested by the Burgess and the Board of Health and should have the hearty endorsement of every citizen.

BORAH BELIEVES TROUBLE IS ALREADY
BREWING OUT OF JAPANESE PACT AND
WILL SO INFORM THE SENATE SOON

Washington, D. C., April 6.—Dangerous complications are brewing in the far east which may lead to war involving the United States because of its ratification of the Pacific Treaty, Senator Borah, of Idaho, will inform the Senate. The recent Japanese-Chita clash is indication that the situation will charge Japan with the responsibility for this trouble. Borah holds that Japan stirred up the row with the Chita republic that culminated in a clash of the Chita-Red troops with fairly heavy casualties. Tokio messages claim that Japan ordered the Reds to retire.

DuBois School Cost For Burgess Kittleberger
1922 Will Be $111,687; Acts On Complaints Of
Millage Laid At 36 1-2 Citizens On Canines

The DuBois City School Board decided on their budget and laid the millage for 1922 at a meeting held Wednesday evening.

DuBois taxpayers will spend approximately $111,686.77 on their schools next term. The total millage is placed at 36 1-2 mills. Of this 26 mills will be devoted to paying teachers' salaries, while 4 1-2 mills, together with the $5.00 per capita school tax is expected to supply $49,400 for current or general expenses. The bond fund will require 6 mills.

The automatic increase in salaries the coming year, under the Teacher's Salary Act will total $7,000, while the budget also provides $4800 for new teachers for this year.

So many complaints have come to Burgess Kittleberger, the past few weeks concerning dogs running at large in the borough that the State Agricultural Department, which has the enforcement of the Dog Law, in their hands, has been appealed to and they insist that an officer be appointed to exterminate all unlicensed dogs and all others found running at large. Dog owners can prevent this being done by getting license tags and tying up their dogs. If this is not done by April 15th, the State law will be complied with to the letter, an officer employed and every dog running at large taken up and shot.

After Speeders Also

Complaint is also being very generally made concerning the way speed maniacs are driving about the town, and this includes truck drivers noisily and recklessly over our streets. This, too, must be stopped without further delay and as warnings do not appear to have any effect the Burgess has ordered that distances be measured off on three streets in the town for the purpose of trapping these speed demons. These measured courses will be properly marked off and two watchmen assigned to each and law violations in this regard will be brought up with a round turn. Fine and costs will be visited on every violator without fear or favor and those who would save themselves trouble and expense will do well to heed this announcement and obey the law.

VALUABLE CARLOAD
OF MANUFACTURED
GOODS IS GUARDED

A Clearfield manufacturing plant was shipping an order of its finished product to the eastern markets the first of the week and were given a New York Central car for loading on Monday. The loading was completed too late to catch the afternoon freight and it was necessary for the loaded car to remain on the side track above the station all night. The cargo was valued at $5,000 and the New York Central people paid enough attention to the crime wave sweeping the country to put a special watchman on duty whose business was to guard the car and its valuable contents.

DISTRICT OFFICERS TO
CONGRESSIONAL PROBE

John Brophy, president of District No. 2, United Mine Workers of America, and Vice President James Mark, of the same organization, left Clearfield yesterday for Washington, D. C., where they will testify in the hearings being conducted before a Congressional investigating committee into the coal industry.

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By J. D. C.

The present coal strike moved Arthur Brisbane, the great New York Editor to pay his respects to capital and labor. He gave the mine owners credit with manipulating the workman into a position where he would get the worst of it and closed his story by "hitting the nail on the head" with a sledge hammer as follows: The mine owners know where and how to hire intelligence, and pay well for it. The workmen, to a sad extent, remind you of the man that "never forgot an enemy or remembered a friend." They forgot those that help them, they do not adequately reward good leadership.

Literally thousands of fishermen in Pennsylvania have failed to obtain the fishermen's licenses which are required for fishing, except on one's own land, under the act of 1921, and officers of the Department of Fisheries say there will be a rush for the permits in the next fortnight, as the trout season opens on April 15. Arrangements have been made for game, forestry and State police officers to assist the fish wardens in enforcement of the law. Virtually every stream in the State will be covered to see that the law is complied with.

The licenses are procurable from the offices of County Treasurers, and every person more than twenty-one whether male or female, must have one unless on own land. The license also will affect fishing in the Delaware and on Lake Erie. Revenue from the license goes to the Department of Fisheries for operation of hatcheries and propagation work.

The generation of folks now inhabiting Pennsylvania's hills, whether the hills be solidly built into towns densely populated and thrifty, or only dotted here and there with the rhode of some countryman, know little or nothing about old time ecology. If they did and practiced them as the generation which grew up fifty to seventy-five years ago did there would be so many wealthy people they would get into each other's way.

The grandfathers of the present generation never knew what it was to be sent to the store for soap, for instance. Sometimes, some spendthrift would purchase a cake of "fancy" soap for mother's Christmas gift, but that would lay on the soap dish in the guests' room all year, used only when there would be a visitor in the house; when the youngsters would "sneak" it or when big sister was washing up on Saturday evening, preparatory to entertaining her beaux.

They had a cheaper and better way of getting their soap. They conserved their resources and made it. The cost was nothing. Nothing went to waste. Making soap was on a par with grandfather who raised his own tobacco and cured it in the granary. This, when properly aged, was chewed, the old quids were laid on the hearth mantle and dried and when dried and when dry, would be smoked and when smoked, the ashes would be used for snuff.

Soap making was just as complete. The farmers used wood for fuel. The wood ashes were carried to some shed and kept dry. While this accumulation was going on, all greases accumulating about the premises were saved. When the butchering was done, the "dirty" lard was saved; the bacon skins were dried; the strong fryings off the hams, shoulders and fitches were kept, and even the fat bites that the "sneaken younguns" would stick under their plates, were placed in the dirty grease crock.

When spring would come, the barrels were full of wood ashes and the fat crocks were overflowing. A barrel or large cask was then placed with flange about the edge except an upon a large square of sheet iron, open spout at the lowest corner. The cask would be filled with dry wood ashes and water poured on them. Eventually the water would work through the ashes and by the time it got to the bottom and ready to run into a vessel prepared for its reception, it had gathered a sufficient volume of lye to eat up fat meat.

When a sufficient quantity of lye was thus produced, it was placed in an iron kettle, put over a fire and when it was heated and boiled down to the desired strength, the dirty fats were added and after boiling for a time, the fire was permitted to die down and the result was, a kettle full of soft soap.

This process could be kept up as many times as feasible, the limit being only the quantity of fat. So many pounds of fat were required for a given number of gallons of lye. The soap could be placed in a vat or water tight barrel, placed in the cellar and it would keep indefinitely. The soap was of a livery consistency and was most excellent for all purposes. If soft soap would not remove dirt from clothing, floors or board walks, it was certain nothing else would.

To make hard soap, "store" lye was used. Otherwise the process was the same. Just dissolve the lye and add the fats and when the fats had all been eaten up with the lye, it was done and cooling, could be cut out in cakes the desired size. The latter was more generally used about the family laundry and for washing hands and faces. Thus the wastes were used up and not a penny was expended for soap in a year, unless some person got an extravagant streak and bought a cake of toilet soap.

Darken Fish Bowl.

On the outside of your goldfish bowl paint the bottom and about two inches above the bottom in thick green paint. This adds greatly to the comfort of your pets. They will not swim so wildly but seek the bottom and rest. Very pretty castles can be built of rough pebbles, and cement (choosing a cement that will not be affected by water) projections, nooks and tunnels will be appreciated by the fish. Boys and girls, too, will find making them a pleasure.

Trusts as Ancient as Pyramids.

Like many other things supposed to be entirely modern, trusts are by no means new features of life. They are, indeed, at least as ancient as the pyramids. It appears that the earliest form of trust was the cornering of foodstuffs by monarchs and their agents. Assyrian records 7,000 or 8,000 years old give accounts of these monopolistic transactions by tyrannical rulers.

Good Bye Wear

THE fact that distribution has been established locally for Marathon Motor Oils is GOOD NEWS for the automobile and truck owner.

The Lubrication of the automotive engine is a serious problem. SERVICE AND SAFETY demand that FRICTION AND WEAR be reduced to a minimum.

Merely "oiling" your car will not accomplish this result—it must be properly lubricated.

MARATHON MOTOR OILS are scientifically prepared, under the direction of Lubrication Engineers, to meet a given mechanical condition. They are marketed on a basis of GUARANTEED RESULTS by the Transcontinental Oil Company, an organization substantially able to fulfill its obligations.

We are ready to serve you with Marathon Lubrication.

As an event in the Christianity of humanity, Easter, not so much unlike the Christmas season which comes a few months before, is a great day of hope and new life. And Easter has the additional charm of being seasonable. The enthusiasm of the devotees of the Easter bonnet and other finery is contagious; its impulse to exult in the advent of a new order is irresistible to humankind.

Easter symbolizes the triumph of the spirit over the body. And so it is in the growing world of vegetation. Obtrusion of selfishness, feverish materialism and unseemly display are not to be sanctioned at the expense of the heart and soul of humanity, but as an annual reminder of the one great fundamental truth, it is the most significant of all days.

To the thoughtful Easter is proof unbounded of hope inexhaustible, of life eternal, of promises that will be fulfilled. It is a day without parallel. With the sublime figure of the resurrection before him, no man need despair. It makes the believer see his future with a confidence rooted in firm faith and guided by the event which gave the world a new chart of life.

The banker furnishes, in one way or another, a large part of the money with which business is conducted. Having lent money to be used in a business venture, he keeps a keen eye on the progress of that venture and on the growing or decreasing value of its assets. A man who advances the money for the plow and the fertilizer and the seed and the live-stock, to be repaid from the proceeds of the crops, is naturally interested in the growth of the corn and the wheat.

What does the banker think of advertising as a force tending to insure the repayment of the money he lends to business?

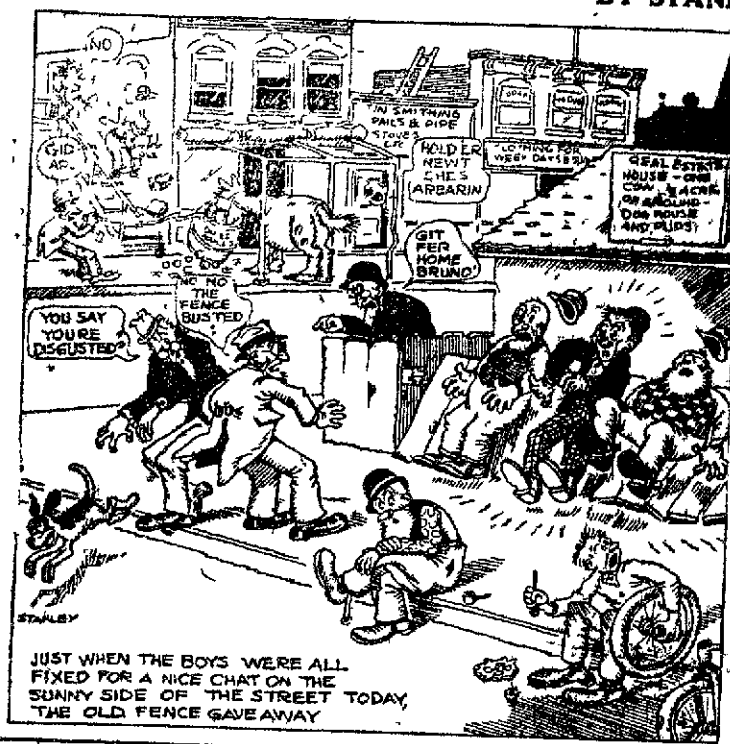

Guy Emerson, vice president of the National Bank of Commerce in New York, says:

"It is becoming more and more common for bankers to regard a radical-cutting down of an advertising expenditure with close attention. The sharp reduction in the advertising of nationally distributed articles, the reputations of which were apparently so firmly established that nothing could affect them adversely, has been followed so regularly by a heavy falling off in sales that the need for caution in such cases is widely recognized. The banker is coming to realize that public interest is not necessarily a permanent possession. Not even the greatest corporation of the most popular product can hope to build up a reputation which will of its force endure."

Mr. Emerson is a little guarded in his language, but you get what he means. The banker does not like to see his client's business choked by advertising curtailment.

Expert Story Teller Here
On Community Work;
Hear Her This Evening

Mrs. E. H. Hanley, who is in Clearfield for the first three days of this week to put on a course in story telling for Clearfield Community Service, is a very interesting and experienced person. She has come here from Elmira, N. Y., where she has been doing the preliminary organization work on a large historical pageant of the Chenango Valley, which is to be given there in the Autumn. Part to her work with Community Service and War Camp Community Service during the war, Mrs. Hanley conducted a private school for young children in New York City, using dramatics, music and rhymes as a basis of primary education. In these courses, story telling occupied a prominent place.

She expects to be able to cover in the three sessions she will hold here, the value of the story in the child life of the church and the play ground, the home, the library and the day ground, types of stories for different ages, special seasonal stories and story telling as an adjunct to teaching courses in the schools. During the work during the vacation period she will also emphasize the value of story telling as a means of acquiring poise and ease in speaking, and will give a practical demonstration of story telling and story playing.

The first session will be held in the High School this (Thursday) evening at 7 o'clock. Although primarily for those who will volunteer some time for this work on the day ground this summer, all who have to deal with children are most welcome.

A Sudden Breeze.

A kind hearted motorist, seeing an old woman toiling along the road, offered to give her a lift. It was her first ride in an auto and as the motorist put on speed he was amused to hear her exclaim: "My, but hasn't the wind come up sudden?"—Boston Transcript

That's one of the best recommendations that our milk could have when the health authorities who are looking into the kiddies' welfare in school are using it to bring the underweight kiddies up to normal.

The local school board or the school nurse would not use "Clearfield Milk" if it wasn't just the best milk they could find and the milk that carries health and betterment in every ounce.

That's a lesson for grown-ups, too. A lesson wherein you may put on some weight and it's a healthy weight, inasmuch as the ingredients of the milk make a staunch and sturdy flesh.

BEFORE YOU WASH
CURTAINS THIS SPRING—
READ THIS:

Before you struggle this spring with the bothersome business of washing curtains and pinning them to the floor, or on an old-fashioned frame, call us.

We have just installed a wonderful new Curtain Dryer and Finisher which enables us to finish your curtains exactly to measure, without the use of a single hook or pin to mar the fabric. Edges and scallops are perfectly true.

Before washing the curtains, we measure them. After a cleansing bath in ramsoft water and bubbly suds, we dry them—no pulling or stretching is necessary, your curtains come back exactly their original size and shape, daintily and professionally finished.

Send us your curtains—our service will delight you. Phone us today and our representative will call.

School NurseStrength in Proportion.
It is impossible to name the strongest animal since some of the smallest insects have more strength in propo-tion to their weight than the very largest animals. An ant, for instance,
may carry a load fifteen or twenty

weight.Some Risk in Everything.
While it may be true that the man

Gipsies in History.

The original gipsies appeared in Europe at about the beginning of the sixteenth century. It is probable that they were of Hindu origin and were either exiled because of their religious beliefs or ran away from the persecution of Tamerlane, or Timur, the great
Tartar conqueror who invaded India.
As their origin was a mystery to Europe when they appeared on its Eastern plains, some German savant declared that they were Egyptians. The popular corruption of the word
"Egyptian" is the name by which they are now known the world over.

We Want You To Know The Facts

A Statement By

The Association of Bituminous Coal Operators of Central Pennsylvania

In a series of statements, of which this is the first, we want to present to you, and by you we mean the man who toils, the business man, the professional man and the miner himself, the facts and conditions leading up to and incident to the strike of the members of the U. M. W. of A., in District No. 2 now in progress.

On March 6th, 1922, Mr. B. M. Clark, President of this Association, wrote to Mr. John Brophy, President of the United Mine Workers of America of District No. 2, Clearfield, Pa., as follows:

"Please advise me at once what date will suit for conferences of our respective scale committees for the purpose of negotiating a scale effective April 1, 1922, to April 1, 1924. It is the desire of the operators, members of our association, for as early a conference as possible."

No written reply was received but on March 17, 1922, Mr. Brophy and Mr. James Marks, President and Vice President, respectively, of the U. M. W. of A., of District No. 2, called personally on Mr. Clark at Indiana, Pa., and advised him that the miners scale committee for District No. 2 would not meet the scale committee of the operators association for the purpose of negotiating a scale agreement until after a settlement had been effected between the United Mine Workers and operators of the Central Competitive field, and that from the best information he could obtain there was no probability of a joint conference in that field prior to April 1, on which date the union miners of this district would strike, or cease to work.

This declaration by Mr. Brophy was carried into effect April 1, not only in direct violation of the customs of the miners in Central Pennsylvania the past 23 years, but also in direct violation of the agreement signed by operators and United Mine Workers of District No. 2, April 26, 1920. The operators and miners of Central Pennsylvania have never taken part in the conferences of the Central Competitive field and never were parties to the wage agreements executed by the operators and miners in that field.

The operators and miners of the Central Pennsylvania field have for the past 23 years negotiated and concluded their own scale agreement governing the Central District of Pennsylvania. In violation of custom and precedent of 23 years standing the U. M. W. of A. of District No. 2, refused to meet the operators of this association to negotiate a wage scale and agreement and in violation of their contract of April 26, 1920, went on strike April 1 last.

Rule 25 of the scale agreement which expired March 31st, 1922, provides:

"In the event of a new scale agreement not having been signed on or before March 31, 1922, then and in that event the U. M. W. of A., District No. 2, will continue all men in mines regularly at work under the wages and conditions of this agreement for an additional thirty days after the date on which the Scale Committees of operators and miners hold their first meeting for the purpose of negotiating a scale to succeed this present contract, the wages paid by the operators to the miners dating from April 1st, 1922, for such portion of the 30 days work as extend beyond April 1st, 1922, shall be those that are agreed to in the next contract. * * *

One minute after the scale agreement of April 26, 1920 expired the union miners of District No. 2 went on strike. The walkout was not delayed so much as 30 minutes, let alone the 30 days to which the miners scale committee of District No. 2, U. M. W. of A. had bound the members of its organization by solemn agreement with the Association of Bituminous Coal Operators of Central Pennsylvania.

Quirinal Originally Church Property. The Quirinal is one of the seven hills upon which Rome stands; it was dedicated by the ancient Romans to Romulus, or Quirinus. The Quirinal palace was built in the sixteenth century by the Roman Catholic church, but after the breach between the church and state in 1870 it became the residence of the Italian kings. The Quirinal, as it is figuratively used, means the court of united Italy and the monarchical regime.

"I can't quite get the proper slant on men of the Collingwood type," he remarked, after the pause. "The only time I ever saw him was on the night before the directors' meeting last spring. He was here with his uncle's party in the special train, and that night at the Bullard he had been drinking too much and made a braying ass of himself. I had to knock him silly before I could get him up to his room."

"You did that, Graham?—for a stranger?"

"I did it for the comfort of all concerned. As I say, he was making an ass of himself."

There was another break, and then the major looked up with a little frown.

"That was before you had met Sheila?" he asked, thoughtfully.

"Why, no; not exactly. It was the same night—the night we all dropped off the 'Flyer' and got left behind at Sand Creek. You may remember that we came in later on Mr. Chadwick's special."

The major made no reply to this, and pretty soon the boss was on his feet and excusing himself once more on the after-dinner smoking stunt, saying that he was obliged to go back to the office. The major got up and shook hands with him as if he were bidding him good-bye for a long journey. "You are going down to keep that appointment with Mistle Ruffus Hatch?" he said. "You take an old man's advice, Graham, my boy, and keep your hand—figuratively speaking, of course—on your gun. It runs in my mind, somehow, that you are going to be hit—and hit right hard. No, don't ask me why. Call it a rotten suspicion, and let it go at that. Come up to the house, afterward, if you have time, and tell me I'm a false prophet, huh; I hope you may."

The boss promised plenty cheerfully as to the calling part, as you'd know he would since he hadn't seen Mrs. Sheila for I don't know how long; and a few minutes later we were on our way, walking briskly, to keep the Fred May engagement with the chief of the grafters.

CHAPTER XIV

The Dead-Lina

We found the three disappointed afternoon callers already on hand when we reached the headquarters. The boss said, "Good evening, gentlemen," as pleasant as a basket of chips, and invited the waiting bunch into the private office, snapping on the lights as he opened the door.

No introductions were needed. One of the pair Hatch had brought with him was a lawyer named Marrow, whose home town was Sedgwick; a sharp-nosed, ferret-eyed man who figured as one of the many "local consuls" for Red Tower. The other, Dedmon, was a political place-hunter who had once been sheriff of Arrowhead county.

"You've kept us cooling our heels in your waiting-room for just about the last time, Mr. Norcross!" was the spiteful way in which Hatch opened fire. "We've come to talk straight business with you this trip, and it will be in line to your interest than ours if you sit and wait."

While they had been dragging up their chairs and sitting down, I had heard Fred May lock up his typewriter and go, and had been listening anxiously for some noise that would tell me Tarbell was on deck. I thought I heard the door of the outer office open again just as Hatch spoke and it comforted me a whole lot.

The boss didn't pay any attention to Hatch's suggestion about sending me away; acted as if he hadn't heard it. Opening his desk he took a box of cigars from a drawer and passed it. With this concession to the small hospitalities the boss swung his chair to face the trio.

"My time is yours, gentlemen," he said; and Hatch jumped in like a man fairly spilling for a fight.

"For six months, Norcross, you've been moving a pretty wide swath out here in the tall hills. You've been posing as a little tin god before the people of this state, and all the while you've been knifing and slugging and black-jacking private capital and private business wherever and whenever they have happened to get in your way. Now, at the end of the lane, by Jupiter, we've got you dead to rights—you and your d-d railroad!"

"Cut out as many of the personalities as you can, and come to the point," suggested the boss quietly. "You think I haven't any point to come to?" barked the grafter, with rising anger. "I'll show you! You thought you were the only original trust-usts. When you started your scheme of locally owned elevators and warehouses and coal and lumber yards and ran us out of business, but I'm here to tell you that your fine-haired little deal is rob us began to die about as soon as it was born."

"How so?" inquired the boss.

"It was a month before your little local stockholders began to get together and swap stock and sell it. In a very short time the control of the whole string of local plants was in the hands of a hundred men. To-day it's in the hands of less than twenty with John Marshall at the head of them. Citizens' Storage & Warehouse is now a consolidated property, and John Marshall, Henckel and I control a majority of its stock. How does that strike you?"

"We've Got You Dead to Rights, You and Your D-d Railroad!"

"It strikes me that the people most deeply interested have been exceedingly foolish to sell their birdright. But that is strictly their own business, and not mine or the railroad company's."

"Wait!" Hatch snarled. "It's going to be both yours and the railroad company's business, before you are through with it. Marrow, here, represents Marshall, and I represent Henckel and myself. What are you going to do about those ground-leases?"

"Nothing at all, except to insist upon the condition under which they were granted by the railroad company."

"Meaning that you are going to try to hold us to the fixed percentage charge for handling, packing, loading, and transferring?"

"Meaning just that. If you raise the proportional market-price charge on the producers and merchants, the leases will terminate."

"I thought that was about where you'd land. Now listen: we're it—Marshall and Henckel and I—and what we say, goes as it lies. We are going to use the present C. S. & W. plants and equipment, charging our own storage and handling percentages, based on anything we see fit. If you pull that ground-lease business on us and try to drive us out, we'll fight you all the way up to the Supreme court. If you beat us there, we'll merely move over to the other side of your tracks to our old Red Tower houses and yards and go on doing business at the old stand."

The boss sat back in his chair, and I could tell by the set of his jaw that he was refusing to be panic-stricken. "You are talking altogether too much for granted, aren't you?" he put in mildly. "You are assuming that the courts will eventually nullify the terms of the ground-leases, or if they do not, that the railroad company will do nothing to save its patrons from falling into this new graft trap."

Hatch snapped his fingers. "Now you are coming to the milk in the coconut!" he rapped out. "That is exactly what we're assuming. You are going to let go, once for all, Norcross. You are not going to fight us in the courts, and neither are you going to allow us out of existence with short cuts, over-charges, and the thousand and one petty persecutions that you railroad buccaners make use of to line your own pockets!"

"But if we refuse to lie down and let you walk over us and our patrons—what then?" the boss inquired.

That brought the explosion. Hatch's eyes blazed and he snarled flat into palm. "Then we'll knife you, and we'll do it to a velvet finish! After so long a time, we've got you where you can't side-step, Norcross."

The boss refused to be panic-stricken; or, anyhow, he looked that way. "We've heard that kind of talk many times in the past," he said. "The way to make it effective is to produce the goods."

"That's just what we're here to do!" snapped the Red Tower president vindictively. "You, and the Big Fellows in New York, want a lot of the state railroad laws repealed or amended. If you can't get that string untied, you can't gamble any more with your stock. Well and good. You came here six months ago and set out to manufacture public sentiment in favor of the railroad. You ran up your public-be-pleased flag and beat the tom-tom and blew the hewgag until you got a lot of dolts and chuckle-heads and easy marks to believe that you really meant it."

"Well, go on."

"With all this humbug and hulla-balloo you still couldn't be quite certain that you had made your point; that your measures would carry through the incoming legislature. After the primaries you counted noses among the candidates and found it was going to be a tight squeak—a d-d tight squeak. Then you did what you railroad people always do; you slipped out quietly and bought a few men—just to be on the safe side."

So it was sprung at last. Hatch was accusing us of the one thing that we hadn't done; that the boss knew we hadn't done.

"I'm afraid you'll have to try again, Mr. Hatch," he said, with a steady gaze.

"You mean that you will go to the state at the slip and heard him say, half to himself, "Howard Collingwood!"

Hatch followed up his advantage promptly. He was afoot and struggling into his overcoat when he said, "You've got what you want after, Norcross, and it has got your goat. We've known all along that you were only bluffing and spouting to gain time. We've nailed you to the cross. You let this deal with Marshall and his people stand as it's made, or we'll show you up for what you are. That's the plain English of it."

newspapers with this?" said the boss, and it was no wonder that his voice was a bit husky.

"Just that. We'll give you plenty of time to think it over. The joint deal with C. S. & W. goes into effect tomorrow, and it's up to you to sit tight in the boat and let us alone. If you don't—if you butt in with the ground-leases, or in any other way—the story will go to the newspapers and every sucker on the line of the P. S. I. will know how you've been pulling the wool over his eyes with all this guff about 'justice first,' and 'the public be pleased.' You're no fool, Norcross. You know they won't lay it to Dutton and the New Yorkers. You've taken pains to advertise it far and wide that you are running this railroad on your own responsibility, and the people are going to take you at your word."

Dedmon, and the lawyer—who hadn't spoken a single word in all the talk—were edging toward the door. The boss didn't make any answer to Hatch's wind-up except to say, "Is that all?"

The other two went out, now, and Hatch turned to stick his ugly jaw out at the boss, and to say, just as if I hadn't been there to look on and hear him:

"No, by Jupiter—it isn't all! In the past six months you've made Gus Henckel and me lose a cold half-million, Norcross. For a less provocation than that, many a man in this neck of woods has been sent back east in the baggage-car, wearing a wooden overcoat. You climb down, and do it while you can stay alive!"

For some time after the three men went away the boss sat staring at the slip of paper on the desk sledge. At last he got up, sort of tiredly, I thought, and said to me: "Jimmie, you go down and see if you can find a taxi, and we'll drive out to Major Kendrick's. I promised him I'd go out to the house, you remember."

When our taxi stopped at the major's gate, somebody was coming out just as we were getting ready to go in. The man had the visor of his big flat golf cap pulled down well over his eyes, but I knew him just the same. It was Collingwood!

This looked like more trouble. What was the president's nephew doing here? I wondered about that, and also, if the boss had recognized Collingwood if he had, he made no sign, and a moment later I had pushed the bell-push and Maisie Ann was opening the door for us.

"Both of you? oh, how nice!" she said, with a smile for the boss and a queer little grimace for me. "Come in. This is our evening for callers. Cousin Basil is out, but he'll be back pretty soon, and be left word for you to wait if you got here before he did."

That message was for the boss, and I lagged behind in the dimly lighted hall while she was showing him into the back parlor. I had dropped down on the hall settee, in the end of it next to the coat-rack, and when Mrs. Sheila came down-stairs and went through the hall, she didn't see me. A second later I heard the boss jump up and say, "At last! It seems as if you had been gone a year rather than a fortnight," and then Maisie Ann came doling out and plunked herself down on the settee beside me.

You needn't tell me that we had no right to sit there listening; I know it well enough. On the other hand, I was just shirky enough to shift the responsibility to Maisie Ann. She didn't make any move to duck, so I didn't.

"You came out to see Cousin Basil?" Mrs. Sheila was saying to the boss. And then: "He had a telephone call from the Bullard, and he asked me to tell you to wait." After that, I guess she sat down to help him wait, for pretty soon we heard her say: "Cousin Basil has told me a little about the new trouble—have you been having a hard quarter of an hour?"

"The worst of the lot," the boss said gravely, and from that he went on to tell her about the Hatch visit and what had come of it; how the grafters had a new claw hold on him, now made possible by an unwarranted piece of meddling on the part of the New York people in the political game.

It was while he was talking about this that Maisie Ann grabbed me by the wrist and dragged me bodily into the darkened front parlor, the door to which was just on the other side of the coat rack. "I thought she had come to her right senses, at last, and was making the shift to break off the eavesdropping. That being the case, I was simply horrified when I found that she was merely fixing it so that we could both see and hear. The sliding doors between the two parlors were cracked open about an inch, and I realized what she was doing: she had pulled me down on the floor beside her, right in front of that crack."

"If you move or make a noise, I'll scream and they'll come in here and end us both!" she hissed in my ear; and because I didn't know what else to do with such a kiddish little terrapint, I sat still. It was dastardly, I know; but what was I to do?

When the boss finished telling her about the Hatch talk, Mrs. Sheila said: "You mean that Mr. Dutton and his associates sent somebody out here to influence the election?"

"Yes; that is it, precisely. But how did you know?"

"You made the inference perfectly plain," she countered. "I have a reasoning mind, Graham; haven't you discovered it before this?"

The boss nodded soberly. "I have discovered a good many things about you during the past six months; one of them is that there was never another woman like you since the world began."

Knowing, as I did, that she had a husband alive and kicking around somewhere, it seemed as if I just couldn't star there and listen to what a break of that kind on the boss' part was likely to lead up to. But Maisie Ann gripped my wrist until she hurt.

"You must listen!" she whispered fiercely. "You're taking care of him, and you've got to know!"

As on many other earlier occasions, Mrs. Sheila slid away from the sentimental side of things just as easy as turning your hand over.

"You are too big a man to let an added difficulty defeat you now," she remarked calmly, going back to the business field. "You are really making a miraculous success. I have just spent two weeks in the capital, as you know, and everybody is talking about you. They say you are in a fair way to solve the big problem—the problem of bringing the railroads and the people together in a peaceable and profitable partnership—which is as it should be."

"It can be done; and I could do it right here on the Pioneer Short Line if I didn't have to fight so many different kinds of devils at the same time," said the boss, scowling down at the fire in the grate. And then with a quick jerk of his head to face her: "You sent the major a wire from the capital last night, telling him to persuade me not to go to Strathcona. Why did you do that? And how did you know I was thinking of going?"

For the first time in the whole six months I saw Mrs. Sheila get a little flustered, though she didn't show it much, only a little more color in her cheeks.

"Some day, perhaps, I may tell you, but I can't now," she said sort of hurriedly. And then: "You mustn't ask me."

"But you did send the wire?"

"Yes."

"And you also sent another to Upton Van Brit?"

"I did."

The boss smiled. "That second message was an after-thought. You were afraid I'd be stubborn and go, anyway. That was some more of your marvelous inner reasoning. Tell me, Sheila, did you know that there was going to be a broken rail-joint set to kill me on that trip?"

That got her in spite of her heavenly calm and I could see her press her pretty lips together hard.

"Was that what they did?" she asked, a bit trembly.

He nodded. "Van Brit was on the pilot engine ahead of my car, and he found it. There was no harm done. It was bad enough, God knows, to set a trap that would have killed everybody on my train; but this other thing that has been pulled off tonight is even worse. Mr. Dutton and his unprincipled followers have set a thing on foot here which is due to grind us all to powder. Fast that they have contrived to handcuff me so that I can't make a move without pulling down consequences of a personal nature upon President Dutton, himself."

"Now my 'marvelous inner reasoning' has gone quite blind," she said, with a queer little smile. "You'll have to explain."

"It's simple enough," said the boss shortly. "If Mr. Dutton had sent only three emissaries out here to bribe the members of the legislature—but he didn't; he included a member of his own family."

I was looking straight at Mrs. Sheila as he spoke, and I saw a sudden frightened shock jump into the slate-gray eyes. Just for a second. Before you could count one, it was gone and she was saying quietly:

"A member of his own family? That is very singular, isn't it? Was there—was this thing that was done actually criminal?" she asked, just breathing it at him.

"It was, indeed. The election laws of this state have teeth. It is a penitentiary offense to bribe either the electorate or the lawmakers."

There was silence for a little time, and she was no longer looking at him; she was staring into the heart of the glowing coals in the grate basket. By and by she said: "You haven't told me this man's name—the one who did the bribing; may I know it?"

I knew just what the boss was going to do, and he did it; took the slip of paper that Dedmon had written on from his pocket and passed it across to her. If there was another shock for her none of us could see it. She had her face turned away when she looked at the name on the paper. Pretty soon she said, sort of drearily:

"Once you told me that the true test of any human being came when he was asked to eliminate the personal factor; to efface himself completely in order that his cause might prosper. Do you still believe that?"

"Of course. It's all in the day's work. Any cause worth while is vastly bigger than any man who is trying to advance it."

"Than any man, yes; but for a woman, Graham, wouldn't you allow something for the woman?"

"I thought we had agreed long ago that there is no double standard, either in morals or ethics—one thing for the man and another for the woman. That is your own attitude, isn't it?"

She didn't say whether it was or not. She was holding the bit of paper he had given her so that the light from the fire fell upon it when she said: "I suppose your duty is quite clear. In the slang of the street, you must 'beat Mr. Hatch to it.' You must be the first to denounce this bribery, clearing yourself and letting the ax fall where it will."

The boss was shaking his head a bit doubtfully.

"It isn't quite so simple as that," he objected. "I don't know that I'd have any compunctions about sending Collingwood to the dump. If the half of what they say of him is true, he is a spineless degenerate and hardly worth saving. But to do as you suggest would be open rebellion you know; while Dutton remains president, I am his subordinate and if I should oppose him and his

the situation here would become simply impossible."

"Well!" she prompted.

"Such a move would rightly and properly bring a wire demand for my resignation, of a nature that couldn't be ignored—only it wouldn't, because I should anticipate it by resigning first. That is a small matter, introducing the personal element. But the results to others; to the men of my staff and the rank and file, and to the public, which, as you say, is just beginning to realize some of the benefits of a real partnership with its principal railroad; these things can't be so easily ignored."

"You have thought of some other expedient?"

"No

Climate and Deafness.
It is curious to note how deaf mutism varies in different countries. In Switzerland, for instance, owing to the prevalence of cretinism, 245 per 100,000 of the inhabitants suffer from it, whereas the general average among European countries is 75, and in the United States, 68, per 100,000.

DOINGS OF THE DUFFS

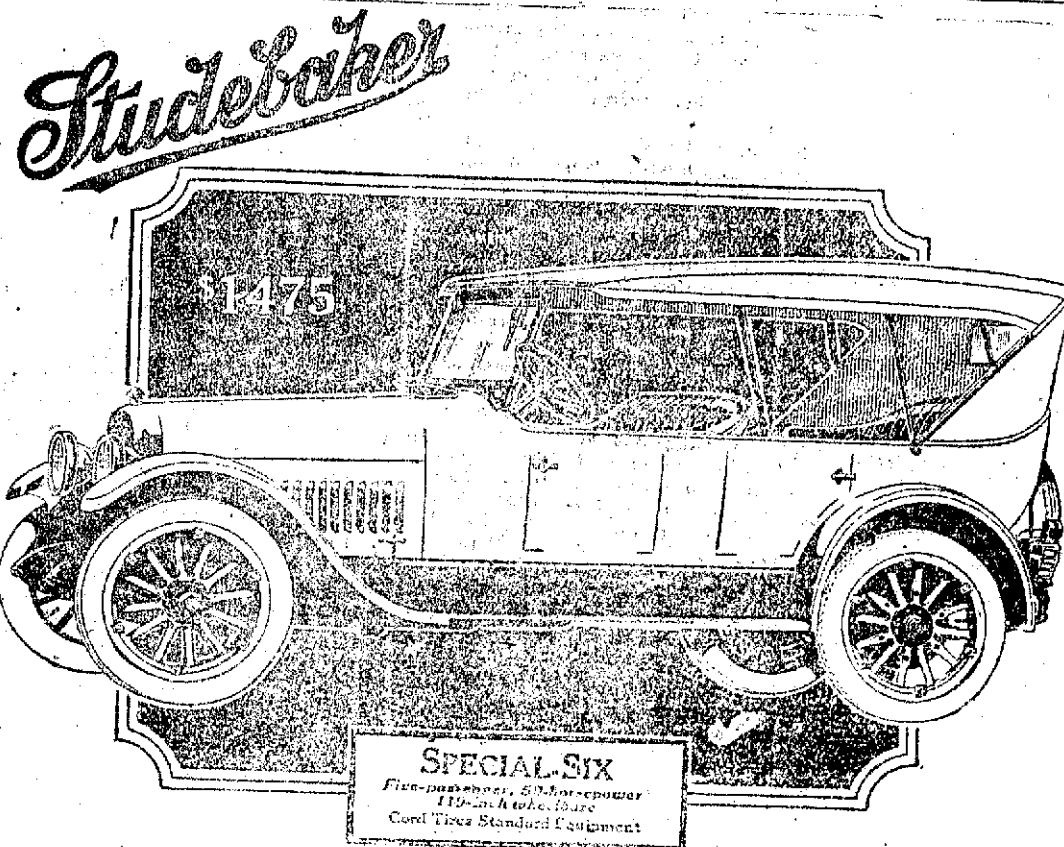

Our Clerics.
Little by little the Jesuits' stock in trade is being depleted through scientific discovery. An English professor now declares that people get sleepy during the sermon because they hypnotize themselves gazing fixedly at the preacher. It is not because they are inattentive, but because they are too attentive. Therefore, jokes on the subject are not knocks for the parson, but boosts.

Two Sorts of Contagion.
Diseases are not the only things that are contagious. Kindness is contagious; mainly integrity is contagious; all the positive virtues, with real red blood in their veins, are contagious. —Henry VanDyke.

Legend of "Moonmaker."
The title "moonmaker" has been applied to Hakkim Ibn Allah, sometimes also known as the "Velled Prophet of the Khirassan." It is recorded that he caused a moon to issue from a deep well, which was so brilliant that the real moon was eclipsed by it.

Objected to Pairing.
The first known instance of pairing in the congress of the United States was in 1840. John Quincy Adams prepared a resolute declaration that it violated the constitution, an express rule of the house, and the duties of both parties. The resolution was never voted upon and the practice became very common.

Birds in the Dark.
Not a few birds practically rear their nestlings in the dark, says the American Forestry Magazine. Well-known examples of this are seen in sand-martins and kingfishers—birds that dig, or scrape out, long burrows in banks, and lay their eggs at the further end of them.

IN buying a motor car, you either buy satisfaction—or you don't. You buy positive satisfaction when you select the Studebaker SPECIAL SIX. Here's why:

Rheumatism Caused Heart Trouble

Stomach and Bowel Trouble Caused Rheumatism

When the stomach and bowels are so badly out of order that they caused the food to sour and ferment in the stomach and digestive tract, forming gas that bloats and distends the internal organs, until they press hard upon the heart it is time to do something to stop it.

That is what Mr. Chas. Myer of Uniontown, Pa., did—he got a dollar bottle of Nerv-Worth and felt better before he had finished the bottle. In a short time he declared himself well with all his old time strength and vigor back and sleeping like a top, eating anything he wanted and able to do a man's work every day.

With his other troubles he had headaches and severe attacks of rheumatism—caused of course by the poisons the disordered stomach and bowels were distributing throughout his system every day. After he took Nerv-worth he had no more rheumatism nor severe headaches.

Most first class druggists sell Nerv-worth at one dollar a bottle. You can always get it at Stewart's drug store in this city and every drug store is authorized to give the money back if not satisfied with the results of the first bottle.

Get at the Real Cause—Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, away goes indigestion and stomach trouble.

Have you a bad taste, coated tongue, poor appetite, a lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested foods? Take Olive Tablets the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief. Eat what you like. 15c and 30c Votes of British Parliament Chiefs.

The difference between the speaker of the English house of commons and the lord chancellor, who occupies a similar position in the house of lords, is that while the speaker cannot take part in debates and can vote only when there is a tie, the lord chancellor is entitled to speak and vote on all occasions.

Fighting Fire With Fire Insurance

It's a wonderful thing the way folks will turn out to help you fight the dread fire fiend when it assails your property, but have you thought that a very good way to fight fire would be with plenty of fire insurance?

Even if you now have SOME, could you replace your property for what your insurance would net you? You know, these days building costs are much higher and will remain higher for years to come, than they were when you first built.

Let's talk this matter over and let me explain the merits of the companies that I represent.

EASTER

The season of renewal of life—the budding of trees and shrubs—the springing up of a carpet of grass—the awakening of nature. The time when we feel the urge to renew our homes and surroundings.

Follow the example of Mother Nature this Easter. Go over your home equipment and decide on improvement and renewals. The question of modern sanitary plumbing and plumbing fixtures is one that is closest to the health of your household and deserves your best attention.

If you haven't the time to do this yourself, call us. We'll put things right with the least possible trouble to you.

WAKE UP!

That's what these alarm clocks of ours say in a very positive manner. There's no turning over and taking another "forty winks," you are dragged out of bed, figuratively speaking, by the insistent little alarm.

They're good timekeepers, too, and well worth the price we have put on them. Drop in and see them work and see what a good clock we are offering you for the money.
